UNCLE EB VISITS CHICAGO

A VEST POCKET ESSAY ON THE FAIR

"At the next Century of Progress," said Uncle Eb, "I sure hope they have overstuffed roads that's as easy on folks' feet as sick chairs are on their carcasses. Never was so many happy people with sore feet b'fore, and I calcalate I missed fewer sets than most at many an all night barn dance or other shin-dig in my day. But, seems as though a feller consumes a lot o' time travelin' on his own hind legs, lookin' at time-savin' devices like aeroplanes, dish washers, speed boats, telegraph, can openers, teletypes, an' sich. Anyway, now that we got all these gadgets fer savin' time, what are we gonna do with our savin's? You can't picklel time, nor can it, nor salt it down fer your old age when your days is runnin' short. Seems to me, time, like a kiss, is no good unless it's used, an' bein' miserly with either one causes cramps of the disposition. Had an onery cow once, wouldn't give down her milk, an' after a while she got caked up an' couldn't give it down even though it hurt her to keep it. Per'aps these folks that's too savin' get their milk o' human kindness curdled in the same ay an' it hurts 'em to give, an' it hurts 'em to keep. But as I was sayin' about the Fair though, it's a great sight. I'm figgerin' on goin' to the one a hundred years from now and comparin' the progress made. Fer 60 odd years now, I been a eatin' my vitamins, calcium, iron, phosphorous, roughage, an' sich things I needed to grow old an' healthy—an' I jest discovered Mother is a high-class dietitian and didn't know it. But these food fellers is time-savers, too. Instead of calin' 'em reg'lar names, they abbreviate 'em to A. B. C., N. R. A., A. A. A., P. D. Q., or somethin' that don't mean anythin' as long as you eat 'em reg'lar.

"Feedin' folks or animals the stuff they need to grow good strong bones, healthy muscules and resistance to disease is pretty much common sense plus a few facts. Speakin' o' disease, I heard a feller say that in the last 100 years we had stamped out foot-and-mouth disease and controlled several others, but hog cholera still had most of us bluffed if not licked. Strange ain't it, how a germ without arms, legs or wings can get spread 'bout so fast before killin' time in the Fall. I calcalate what I read is right, about it bein' spread by feedin' cholera-infected pork scraps to hops.

But as I was sayin5 'bout the Fair ——."

BETTER ORDER A HAM

Mrs. Brown always allowed her maid to have her young man in the kitchen in the evening. But knowing the girl was entertaining a new swain, she stole downstairs and listened at the kitchen door.

Next morning she said to her maid: "Mary, your new young man seems very quiet. I never hear any sound of talking while he is here."

"No, mum," replied the girl, "he's that shy he's done nothing but eat up to now."

OCTOBER FIRST NRA DEADLINE SUBSTITUTION OF NRA CODES

MUST BE MADE BEFORE THAT TIME

National Recovery Administrator Hugh S. Johnson has announced that October 1 is the deadline for substitution of codes under paragraph 13 of the President's Reemploymnt Agreement. It as also announced that General Johnson will no longer approve the substitution of codes presented by industrial or trade groups which aggregate less than 1,000 employees. Individual firms belonging to such industry or trade groups not already under the Blue Eagle and which cannot comply with the President's Reemployment Agreement, should seek an exception under paragraph 14.

Many entire industries, some of them amongst the country's largest, as well as millions of private firms anxious to display the Blue Eagle, have taken advantage of paragraph 13, which reads as follows:

"This agreemnt shall cease upon approval by the President of a code to which the undersigned is subject; or, if the NRA so elects, upon submission of a code to which the undersigned is subject and substitution of any of the provisions for any of the terms of this agreement."

The purpose of allowing substituted or modified codes was to provide an immediate means to all employers for subscribing to the labor provisions of the Recovery Act through shortening hours to give more employment and increase minimum rates of pay, pending adoption of codes of fair competition covering all industries. Substituted codes were granted on the understanding that they were to be temporary. More than 400 petitions under paragraph 12 have received NRA approval. It is estimated that more than 85 percent of all those now actually employed in industry and trade are in establishments operating under the Blue Eagle, either through substitution of codes or through compliance with the President's Reemployment Agreement without substitution or as a result of the approval of permanent codes. Petitions to substitute codes under paragraph 13 may continue to be filed with the PRA Policy Board until midnight of September 30.

Billion Dollar Credit For NRA MEMBERS OCT. 1

The credit of one billion dollars granted by the Reconstruction Finanee Corporation to banks, trust and mortgage companies beginning October 1 is conditional upon its being relent to solvent business and industrail firms which are complying with the NRA and are in need of temporary financing. The term of the original loans will be six months or portions thereof and the interest rate 3 per cent. In addition the Corporation will reduce its base lending rate from 4½ to 4 per cent. The borrowers will be required to relend at not more than 5 per cent to cover actual cost of labor and purchase of materials for manufacture. The chairman of the Corporation said that relief can be had by the organization of local mortgage companies of substantial nature to supplement bank lending where loans are of a sound nature. With 25 per cent of the unemployed now back at steady jobs and the confident expectation that another million men will be put back during October under codes now being completed, the justification for industrial credit was approved unanimously by the directors of the RFC.

SMALL CRIMINAL DOCKET

From present indications the criminal docket for the October term of the Circuit Court for Kent County will be the smallest for many terms. The October term convenes on Monday, October 16th.

Among the cases which will be presented to the Grand Jury are two manslaughter cases resulting from automobile accidents and the remainder being mostly larceny cases where small sums are involved.
