The Wayside Poet

By J. Thomas Price

Teach Me To Love Like Thee

Teach me to love like Thee, dear Lord,
Teach me to love like Thee;
Nor count the cost in sacrifice,
But tread the path where duty lies,
And help the fallen soul arise,
Teach me to love like Thee.

Teach me to love like Thee, dear Lord,
Teach me to love like Thee;
To raise the fallen by the way,
To teach the weary how to pray,
To help wipe sorrow's tears away,
Teach me to love like Thee.

Teach me to love like Thee, dear Lord,
Teach me to love like Thee;
To guide the children day by day,
To comfort age along the way,
And show to all the Heavenly Way,
Teach me to love like Thee.

LOVE, that brought Thee from Heaven to me,
LOVE, that gave peace in Gethsemene,
LOVE, that conquered on Calvery;
O teach me, my Saviour,
To love like Thee.

THE SQUADRON'S LOG

BY THE STOWAWAY

The October issue of "Motor Boating" contains an article advising owners of power boats how to proceed to put the boat away for the winter so that going overboard in the spring becomes an all winter job.

First, the author advises, haul the boat out of water ad scrub the bottom with an old broom dipped in sand. Wash off the sand with a hose.

"What about barnacles?" the Squadron choruses at this point. Well, an ordinary garden hoe is prime for barnacles. Add that to the broom and sand outfit.

"And river mud," the Squadron ersists "will that take the place of sand?" Mebbe so; hte writer did not mention Chester River mud.

"Just how does a hose work attached to the Chester River?" someone remembers to ask at this point. The answer is, "No can do."

When the bottom is clean, proceed to wash the deck and topsides. Okey.

Then "tackle that necessary bilge cleaning job." Remove the engine and send it to a shop for repairs, or better, tote it home and repair it yourself in the long, cold, winter evenings by the flare of a kerosene lamp.

Use plenty of soap or "bilge cleaning solvent, applied with a brush and a liberal amount of elbow grease." Remove the bottom drain, and let the dirty bilge mess run out over the freshly scoured outside.

Clean the upholstery with a vacuum. "Where do you attach the vacuum?" Better ask the pier committee that one.

Next proceed to remove everything not screwed down from binnacle to anchor, chairs, cushions, boat hooks, bedding, life preservers, and ropes. It is amazing, the things that can happen to ropes left over winter in a nice, dry rope locker!

Cart everything home for winter repairing and so soon as they are repaired, cart them back again piecemeal. Oh, yes, better send the batteries to a service station. The after though is he authors.

Along about spring, everything having been repaired and replaced, when other boatmen appear for the annual rite of getting overboard, the forehanded yachtsman turns the old engine over and chugs away from all the excitement and confusion, maybe.

Bet five dollars he wishes he wasn't so smart. Bet ten dollars he feels like the woman on Christmas Eve who did her Christmas shopping in November.

Pish and two tushes. Any Chester River Squadronite whose boat needed all that foolishness would sell it and buy another.

Here is a chance for a Squadronate to do a Dr. Micou.

NOTED SPANISH PAINTER wishes to exchange his services to paint portraits of family, singly or group, for a cabin cruiser, 30 to 40 ft. Willing to be investigated regarding value of work.

And another chap wants to sell a cracked motor in good condition.

Down by the Yacht Club lake, surveyors have been taking sights, making sketches, measuring and measuring, for two days. A lad's future hangs upon their precision.

One Saturday night, so the story goes, a boy speeding to town crashed into a horse drawn vehicle, killing the horse, and injuring the occupants of the carriage. One of the injured, a young colored girl, died from the results of the accident. Now the boy must be tried for manslaughter. It is a just law.

The degree of the lad's guilt, his conviction or his acquittal will be determined in a court of law. The honesty of the surveyors' work may mean the punishment of a reckless driver, or the exoneration of an unfortunate youth.

In many ways, sometimes unknowingly, we are our brother's keeper.

FOR OCTOBER
BY BETTY WEBSTER

October days are becoming cooler and, although fresh fruits have solved the desert problem during the warm weather the men, especially, want heavier things now and pies seem to answer that craving.

A good pie crust is the pride of every experienced cook, the envy of all poor ones and the desire of each novice. However there is no reason why, if you can follow directions, your pie crust should not be tender and flaky. In the last column you will find two recipes, for the first of which everything must be ice cold and for the second, everything warm and the water boiling.

So you see, you have your choice as to method and either ought to make a perfect crust. If you try one or the other I am sure that you will be the object of much admiration from everybody in the community.

Unique Pencils

I saw the cleverest pencils the other day—so easy to make, too, and lovely for bridge parties. Smooth, round, pencils about four inches long are the bases. These are first dipped into gilt paint and allowed to dry. Then a tassel is fastened to the end of each with red sealing wax. Over the red is then dropped black and then gold wax. Of course, you may select your own color scheme but I have found this one very effective with an orange tassel.

DO YOU KNOW THAT:

1. Lemon juice added to blue-berries when the latter are used in pies, gives a flavor to the otherwise flat-tasting fruit?

2. The white of egg rubbed over the unbaked crust before a watery filling (such as rhubarb) is added will keep the pie crust from becoming soggy?

3. Pie crust will keep for several days if it is placed in the ice-box?

RECIPES

Pie Crust No. 1

1 1-2 cups of flour sifted with
1-2 teaspoonful of salt
1-2 cup of lard
3 tablespoons of ice water

Cut the lard into flour and salt until thoroughly mixed; pour water into center of mixture and mix with fingers until a dry dough is formed. Roll half at a time. More water may be added if necessary but do not get a moist dough, for a moist dough means a tough pie crust. All ingredients should be thoroughly chilled.

Pie Crust No. 2

1 cup of flour, sifted with
1-2 teaspoonful of baking powder and salt (about 1-2 teaspoonful)
1-2 cup of boiling water

Mix thoroughly and place in refrigerator until cold. Roll half at a time.
