CHESTERTOWN HIGH SCHOOL

John Truslow

The soccer team of Chestertown High School defeated the church Hill High School team 6-0, at Chestertown on Tuesday afternoon.

The girls field ball team journeyed to Church Hill on Tuesday afternoon and defeated Church Hill 12-4.

Juniors In Home Economics Working At Handwork

The Juniors of the Chestertown High School are doing handwork; such as, making bridge sets. The Freshmen are working on their aprons. The Sophomores are studying foods this semester. At present they are cooking foods suitable for luncheon. The Seniors are working on advanced projects; such as, woolen dresses and suits. Some are learning to knit.

Practice For Dramatic Club Play Begins

On Friday night the nine members of the casts of the dramatic club plays met at Miss Bryan's home to discuss and read their parts.

C. H. S. Soccer Team Plays First Game

On Thursday the soccer team played an unofficial game with a team composed of the Alumni of the Chestertown High School, plus a few members of the second soccer team. Joe Russell acted as referee. The school team defeated their opponents 7 to 4. MacMahon of the Alumni dribbled the ball the length of the field to make the second score for the Alumni. A beautiful penalty kick by Baynard Harper of the school team was the final score of the game. Billy Benjamin replaced Harry Hadaway as fullback in the first half, when Harry Hadaway was kicked on the leg.

C. H. S. Fieldball Team Plays Sudlersville

On Friday the Chestertown High School Fieldball team played Sudlersville. During the first half Miss Bryan, the coach, put the first team in and the first team defeated Sudlersville 6 to 4. The second team played Sudlersville during the second half and were defeated. The second team play positions better than the first. Sudlersville has promised a return game on their first open date.

Drive For Subscriptions Totals $82.00

On Thursday, when the drive for the Crowell Publishing Company subscriptions ended, the business manager reported that $82.00 had been received in Subscriptions. Fifty percent of this goes to the Crowell Publishing Company for magazines. Ten percent is used to buy rewards from the same company for the students who have sold magazines. All that is left is divided between the Boy's Athletic Association and the Girls' Athletic Association, according to the number of subscriptions sold by each. The Boys' Association will receive $24.10. The Girls' Association will receive $12.51.

10C English Class Discusses N. R. A.

Miss Bryan's 10C English class has been collecting data on the N. R. A. for the past two weeks. On Tuesday they are to discuss the N. R. A. Mr. Blades, the principal, is to be the chairman of the group. The class expects to learn a great deal from this discussion.

The High School teachers of Kent were in a conference on Saturday morning. The meeting was called by Mr. Robinson and was addressed by the High School Supervisor, Mr. E. Clark Fontaine. His subject was "What To Teach" which included the topics:

1. Selection of subject matter.
2. Organization of subject matter.
3. Procedure or method.

These also may be espressed as Mr. Fontaine clearly showed, by the terms "where," "whither," and "how."

After the general meeting, a conference of High School Principals was held. A new plan of supervision was discussed.

The Student Council has chosen Mr. Wm. J. Stenger as faculty advisor. A second meeting of the council was held to take care of three disciplinary cases.

Home room organizations have greatly simplified passage through the halls. Passing now is orderly and well taken care of by the class president and conduct committees.

The County Soccer and Field Ball schedules will be announced next week.

We understand the girls are to have Senior and Junior teams. Junior teams will enable the smaller High Schools to have a field ball team. The winner of the Junior loop will play the winner of the Senior loop for the County championship.

SCHOOL DAYS — By DWIG

Cousin Joan

By JANE STEWART

©, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate. WNU Service

THE train came to a stop in the big station as if glad to reach the end of its journey.

Joan felt terribly alone in the big railway terminal. What if her Cousin John Browning should fail to meet her? And how would he recognize her?

He was to wear a blue tie, and to have a handkerchief with a blue edge sticking out of his pocket.

Some one touched her on the shoulder, and at the same instant a voice inquired—it was a pleasant voice—"Are you my Cousin Joan?"

The newly arrived traveler turned quickly. The owner of the voice was younger and more prosperous in appearance than she had expected Cousin John to be, but he wore a blue tie, and out of his pocket peeped a handkerchief with a lavender edge. The thought flashed through her mind, "That's just like a man to get colors mixed."

The girl smiled.

"Yes, I'm your Cousin Joan," she admitted, "and I was really beginning to be frightened for fear I was lost."

The young man took her by the arm.

"This way," he directed to the red cap, steering his newly acquired relative to the right. "My car is parked out on the cross street."

Joan had scarcely expected so luxurious a motor car, and the liveried chauffeur still further amazed her, for her understanding had been that her city relatives were in limited circumstances.

Her escort proceeded to point out the places which he thought would interest her.

"That is the public library," he explained, "and this thoroughfare is said to be the most famous in the world—Fifth avenue itself."

It was all a marvelous experience to the girl from the small town in the Mid-West. But when the car drew up a few moments later in front of an imposing home and the chauffeur turned with the query, "Shall I wait, Mr. Herbert, an' take you down to the office again?" Joan was alarmed.

"No," her companion said, "I'm going to stay at home for the afternoon."

Joan shuddered.

"I'm—I'm afraid there's been a mistake," she said. "I'm Joan Bedford and I've come from Iowa expecting to be met at the station by my cousin, John Browning. I'm afraid," she added with an attractive smile, "that you've got the wrong girl."

Herbert Randall looked thoroughly bewildered. Then his face broke out in a broad grin. "How extraordinary!" he said. "But don't worry—I wasn't trying to pick up a nice girl. You see I was expecting to meet my cousin, Joan Freeland, who was expected on that train from the South. I've never seen her and I doubt if she could be more charming than you, 'Cousin Joan.'"

Joan blushed and her heart took a nose-dive.

"Isn't it funny," she laughed, "that two Joans should have been expected at the same time this morning and both intent on meeting respective cousins?"

Herbert Randall admitted it was and added, "It surely is. If it's all right with you, let's return to Grand Central and see if we can't locate that lost cousin of mine. After the mystery is solved—as I hope it will be without the aid of the police or Traveler's Aid—I'll be glad to take you to your destination."

Back at the station there was no sign of the Joan from Texas. Herbert decided perhaps inquiring at the Traveler's Aid desk might help matters. It did and they learned that Joan Freeland—described as a woman with several bundles and a scotch terrier—had taken a taxi to an address which was Herbert's home.

The young man uttered a sigh of relief.

"That's Cousin Joan, all right," he declared. "I had forgotten she had promised Mother a new Scotty pup. You see, she raises them. Well, now that the mystery of her whereabouts is solved, it's high time you were taken to your cousin's safely."

"I've been enough trouble to you already," Joan Bedford declared. "I'll follow the other Joan's example and take a taxi. It's been terribly nice of you to take care of me and—"

But Herbert interrupted. "You're not going to escape from me so easily, young lady. Think of what might happen if I left you to find your own way about this huge city. I'd never forgive myself if you got lost or stranded. Now, what is Cousin John's address?"

Joan realized with pleasure that it was useless to insist on going off alone in a taxi. So she took her cousin's letter from her purse. "Here's the address, Sir Galahad," she said smilingly to Herbert.

"Thanks. It won't take long to get there. And once you've had a night's rest in the city, how about a drive with me tomorrow?"

In spite of her family's strong advice before leaving for her visit, she found her companion's suggestion extremely agreeable. "Why, certainly," she said, "And am I to continue as 'Cousin Joan'?"

"For a little while, anyway," said Herbert, "At least until we can find some other status that will be more mutually acceptable."

Hints for the Household

BY BETTY WEBSTER

With the fall styles black seems to have come back with renewed vigor to have supplanted most of the bright colors. Of course, navy blue is always in good taste and the new Chanel red and pencil blue are very popular.

In black, materials with a soft luster are the most desired. The loveliest that I have seen for dresses is the heavy crepe satin which is so easily draped and hangs so perfectly. In the colors, the dull materials take precedence, although I have seen a number of beautiful frocks trimmed with shiny bands of bright cloth.

DO YOU KNOW THAT:

1. Rasins added to muffins, corn bread, biscuits, rice pudding, bread pudding, cornstarch pudding, tapioca pudding, apple, rhubarb, cherry or cranberry pie, cakes or candies will give a delicious new flavor to all your favorite dishes?

2. A little cornstarch or a few grains of rice put in the salt shaker will prevent the salt from becoming damp and sticky?

3. Corn starch, white corn meal or magnesia rubbed into white fur and allowed to remain for a day, if possible, will clean it perfectly?

4. Corn starch or magnesia rubbed on a white felt hat and allowed to stand for an hour at least before brushing will save another cleaning bill?

5. White silk hose will never become yellowed if they are washed in lukewarm water with a mild soap and dried in a shady place?

RECIPES

When making jelly even the most experienced cook is sometimes puzzled about the proportion of sugar to use in cooking the fruit juices. The following table is only a general one but it has helped me and I am sure it will save yo usome worry too.

Fruit	Juice Cups	Sugar Cups
Apple	1	3-4
Apple-Quince—1-2 each	1	3-4
Apple-Strawberry—1-2 each	1	3-4
Apple-Rhubarb—1-2 each	1	2-3
Apple-Cherry—1-2 each	1	3-4
Apple-Peach—1-2 each	1	3.4
Apple 1-4
Blackberry	1	3-4
Crabapple	1	3-4
Currant	1	1
Gooseberry (green)	1	1
Green Grape	1	1
Grape	1	3-4
Blueberry	1	2-3

Maple Mousse

1 pint of milk
3 tablespoonfuls of cornstarch
2 eggs
1 cup of brown sugar
1 teaspoonful of vanilla

Put sugar in pan with a little water and heat until thoroughly melted. Heat milk; then add eggs and cornstarch. Boil until thick; add melted sugar and vanilla; beat for a minute. Put into sherbet glasses and cool. When ready to serve, top with whipped cream and nuts, if desired. This is a delicious unfrozen dessert and will serve six to eight people.

TACTFUL TOT

Minister (calling): "And what does your mother do for you when you've been a good girl?"

Margery: "She lets me stay home from church."

WHEN you start at sudden noises, worry over trifles, can't bear the noise that children make, feel irritable and blue—ten to one it's your nerves.

Don't wait until your overwrought nerves have kept you awake half the night and paved the way for another miserable day. Take two teaspoonfuls of Dr. Miles' Nervine and enjoy the relief that follows. Take two more before you go to bed. Sleep—and wake up ready for the day's duties or pleasures.

Dr. Miles' Nervine is now made in two forms—Liquid and Effervescent Tablet. Both are the same therapeutically.

Liquid or Effervescent Tablets at all drug stores.
