DELMARVA HOG GROWERS SHOULD BE ON GUARD

Editorial taken from Wilmington Journal and Every Evening.

"Many men and women on the Delmarva Peninsula are asking the question:

"If a farmer kills his own raising of hogs and sells the meat to the public, would he have to pay the processing tax?"

"For the enlightenment of all such inquirers we will say that we asked Max Matthes, president of the Wilmington Provision Company, what he thought about it. His answer was to produce these excerpts from a bulletin just issued by the Institute of American Meat Packers, of Chicago, of which he is a member:

"Everyone slaughtering a hog for market must pay the processing tax. This tax of fifty cents a hundredweight on hogs, which became effective November 5, applies without exemption to all packers and others, including farmers and retailers, who are engaged in the slaughter of hogs for market.'

"Since the Secretary so far has not issued regulations exempting from the payment of the processing tax the processing of commodities by the producer thereof for sale by him, farmers who dress hogs for sale to their neighbors or to others are not exempted and must pay the processing tax. The same is true of retailers."

"Exemption from the tax is granted only to the producer of a commodity when the commodity processed is for consumption by his own family, employes, or household. Farmers and retailers who dress hogs, or have hogs dressed, for sale to their neighbors or customers are not exempt and, unless special regulations be issued by the Secretary, must pay the processing tax."

"Delmarva farmers and other growers of hogs will do well to give serious heed to those three excerpts, otherwise they may find themselves in the toils of the Federal processing tax law, which imposes a tax of fifty cents a hundred-weight. That tax became effective on November 5."

2. What materials are best suited for couch covers and slip covers.
3. How does color and pattern determine price per yard.
4. What are the most common background colors in cretonne and chintz? Why?
5. Do you know what widths upholstering materials come in? Which is more expensive in the end, narrow cheap, or wider more expensive?
6. How does the pattern and weave of glass curtains affect your selection?
7. How would weave and texture affect your selection of an upholstery fabric?

Hints for the Household

FOR NOVEMBER
BY BETTY WEBSTER

Outdoor affairs have gone out with the falling of the last leaves and only the most persitent golfers are still following that enticing sport. Soon snow will put an end to their enthusiasm and we will all be racking our brains for amusements that will interest us through the long winter to which this climate sentences us.

That sounds as though winter had no compensations for the loss of summer and early fall sports, but of course, it has. Although we cannot enjoy the old fashioned sleigh ride party which has long been consigned to limbo of the past, skating is becoming more and more popular. Then dancing will never be in the discard for old or young and—who cannot play cards, the oldest standby?

Bridge Fascinating

Bridge is not the complicated game it used to be and with the right partner it is very fascinating. Moreover eatables served are of the lightest—coffee and cake or sandwiches, lemonade and cookies, a salad and wafers or ice cream and cake, make the most appropriate refreshments. I have had ginger ale and crackers after an evening of cards.
