Warner Baxter 1PA

He has access to a thousand news

"Such Women Are Dangerous," a comedy-drama starring Warner Baxter, shows on Monday and Tuesday, June 25 and 26 at the New Lyceum Theatre. The film combines romance, intrigue and mystery, and presents Baxter in a role that is ideally suited to his personality. Baxter finds himself the target of the love-making of three charming feminine stars, Rosemary Ames, Rochelle Hudson and Mona Barrie.

Baxter as a handsome bachelor-novelist is the admiration of nine million women readers, but three women are directly concerned with his private life. One of them, his secretary, seeks to protect him from the love of a young girl who aims to marry him, and also a married opera singer who is madly infuated with him.

The young girl commits suicide and the novelst is accused of the murder. It is reported that the humorous and exciting developments through which the novelist is extricated from this unfortunate situation provides a thoroughly amusing and interesting climax to the story.

The film was produced by Al Rock sources that are closed to other sports writers and it is for this reason that his motion picture story "Little Miss Marker" has such a rng of authenticity and such a warm and human charm.

Adolphe Menjou, Dorothy Dell, Charles Bickford and five-year-old Shirley Temple head the cast of Runyon's latest story to reach the screen, "Ltlle Mss Marker," a story of Broadway smart-money gamblers who lose their hearts to a little girl with two dimples and blonde curls.

John Boles is playing the first screen role in years in which he has not had to wear a stiff bosom shirt. It is Fox Film's "Wild Gold," in which he shares featured honors with Claire Trevor and Harry Green. The picture shows on Friday and Saturday, June 29 and 30 at the New Lyceum. The second feature on this program will be the out door action but "Man Trailer" starring Buck Jones.

ett and was directed by James Flood from the screen play by Jane Storm and Oscar M. Sheridan.

Damon Runyon can boast of being the personal friend of every great figure in the American sports world. Many champions of today were 'found' by Runyon in his column, five, ten or twelve years ago.

For more than fifteen years the author of Paramount's picture "Little Miss Marker," coming on Wednesday and Thursday, June 27 and 28 to the New Lyceum Theatre, has written the lead stories of America's great sporting events—descriptive gems that are classics in his chosen field of newspaper work—and no other writer has demonstrated such keen knowledge and judgement in sizing up figures in the field of sport. One of his discoveries was Jack Dempsey, and he has been Jack's friend and mentor for many years.

Runyon's sport talks have long been recognized as the most authoritative, original and pertinent of their type.

The annual yachtsmen's dinner will be held Saturday evening at the Chester River Yacht and County Club. This year the Galley Slaves will stay home, unless they are members of Emmanuel Church, for the ladies of the Church will serve the dinner. The Squadron will be there to a man and most male members of the club for it is the big stag affair of the year.

Sydney Johnson of the May Boy, II, has been admitted to membership in the United State Power Squadrons, Inc., Delaware River Squadron. So one more squadron flag will fly from a boat on the Chester River when Sydney is aboard.

Instruction classes held by the Delaware Squadron at the Penn Athletic Club in Philadelphia were well attended this year, Sydney reports, and over 20 candidates passed the examinations admitting them to membership as full fledged Navigators.

Somewhere in the community is a dangerous man.

Early Wednesday morning about half after six, a sedan came racing along Quaker Neck Road headed for Chestertown. Opposite to the Ewings' garage it swerved from the right side of the road to the left, off the cement roadway, a dog howled in anguish, and the car sped on toward town.

Howling, the dog stumbled and staggered home. His owner dropped a hoe and hurried toward the cries. They met in the lima beans and she carried the quivering little beast to the house.

He is only a stray, yellow puppy who found himself a home, and his origin is obscure, but he is as valuable to his owners as though his pedigree began in the Ark. On Easter Day when he made a bed for himself in Colonel Ewing's garage, he was a very young puppy with floppy ears, sharp little eyes and the switchingest kind of tail.

Some said, "He looks like a collie," others, "He must be partly police dog" another, "That dog is part fox." His owner says, "It's the smartest dog I ever had!"

By his efficiency as a mole killer he has won a real place for himself in his adopted home. The lawn is full of holes, a choice clump or two of flowers have dsappeared and the beets are wrecked, but what matter? Neither grass nor beets nor flowers would grow where moles run, and the moles are almost gone. Every little while, the puppy brought a token to his mistress and laid it in her lap or at her feet. A water soaked stick from the lake, a dead mole, shoes and an odorous hoof from a dead horse were a few of his offerings.

It was not an accident that the puppy was hurt. He was on his own home grounds, not in the road. In the soft mud of the road side and the wet clipped grass was impressed the story of a man's lust to harm a weakly creature; the puppy's footsteps, the tracks of the car curving off the road and back again, and the smear in the mud where the puppy was hit.

A few weeks ago similar tell tale marks of an automobile driven off the state road on private ground were found farther up the road. Beside the marks lay the red setter, Peggy, too hurt and shocked to get home to her puppies.

To go out of the way to strike a dog is cowardly cruelty and it is an act of a distorted personality which Medical men call by an ugly name sadiam. A sadist has within him a capacity for crimes of horror. When the pasttime of strikng dogs to derive pleasure from the howl of pain they utter palls and no longer satisfies the lust for cruelty, what worse vice will follow?

Peggy and the puppy are limping around on three legs, recovering, but somewhere in the community is a dangerous man who finds pleasure in cruelty and injuries to the weak.

A NEW RACKET

A new racket has been started in Philadelphia, by renters. One party rented an apartment to presumably reliable tenants, but when they moved out, they took with them the costly built in fridgedaire.

Another owner found hs house stripped of electric lights and everything else that could be taken, away while still another lost all of his bathroom fixtures thus carrying out the slogan that it is cheaper to move than to pay rent.
