NOW AND THEN

Gypsies are becoming less and less as civilization advances, but with their disappearance a great deal of romance is done away. One of their customs is scattering leaves as they go around, thus letting their comrades know the way they have passed. And they call this the Patteran.

So others have adopted the name when they wish to express the way of one's life.

HER PATTERAN

By Henry Longan Stuart.

A Bible entry: "Born, a girl."
A knitted shoe, a golden curl,
A wooly lamb, gay-colored blocks,
Some wee worn garments in a box.

Some dog-eared books, a pair of skates,
Old photographs of all her mates,
Boarding-school letters full of pokes,
And "love to all the dear homefolks."

A glove, a program from a dance,
A rose pressed in an old romance,
A rain of rice along the hall—
Tears on my cheeks—and that is all.

Is there anything more interesting than bees So busy they are with their work that the noise of industry is called the "hum."

Professor von Frisch, of Munich Germany announces that he has found the secret how they communicate their quest for honey to each other.

He explains that when a bee finds food it at once brings a scent gland into operation, emitting an odor which forms a trail of scent in the air as the bee flies back to its hive in a straight line. The bee repeats this as it returns to the newly found source of food. This trail is followed by the other bees and leads them to the food. The scent glands are on the bee's back and the odor is spread as it flies by the movement of its wings. Thus it is by smell and not by sound that such information is spread from one bee to its followers.

We all become victims of bees, some way or other, most often by fear of their sting. Several years ago our Road Engineer had a bee to fly into his car, and in trying to avoid it, had a collision and, for many weeks was housed with an injured knee. Last week, Mrs. Charles Eshman, had a like experience, but she collided with a telephone pole, smashing her car, though fortunately she was not hurt. Bees then are a very interesting study but it is well to use precautions in studying their ways.

There is a picture in a colonial home in Chestertown that is very appealing. It portrays a girl, with a sweet elusive face, carrying a dish of flowers. But there is a tradition that the girls is Salome and the dish that she is carrying is a charger on which the gory head of John the Baptist rests, and that some artist covered the head with flowers. The following article was found the other day.

PAINT-BURIED TREASURE

Although men are constantly hunting for treasure on land and in the sea, not all treasure is buried. Some of it, in the form of lost old masters, is hidden from the eye only by a coat of paint. The man who can discover a copy of the lost painting by Raphael, of a Virgin with the Christ Child clutching at her veil is assured of a fortune. Probably it was not destroyed, but merely worked over by some eighteenth-century restorer, who did not hesitate to repaint so that Raphael's brushwork cannot be seen. Possibly some treasure hunter, armed with an X-ray, will one day find this painting.
