THE TRANSCRIPT

D.CKENS IN A LEAFLET

Those tremendously pressed for time in these days when the agitation for short hours of work centers on the six-hour day and fiveday week, but who wish to be understood as having some familiarity with the classic in fiction, are to have their desires gratified, professedly at least in the matter of Dickens. The great novelist's works are to be condensed and published. The story of "David Copperfield," for instance, is to be "boiled down" into a few hundred words. This condensation, an advertisement of the forthcoming issue says, will have "all the flavor of the complete novel" with "all its charm and skill." This is the promise. There are some incredible geniuses in this world. Maybe one or all of them have successfully slashed Dickens' masterpiece down to pamphlet size and made the great novelist better than he is in his "unedited" works. Seeing is believeing. Until then one can not avoid a certain skepticism.

It is difficult to imagine Dickens condensed and nothing lost out in the whittling process, as the publisher promises. Think of portraying David Copperfeld, Micawber, Peggotty, Betsy Trotwood, Uriah Heep and the others of the cast of perfectly delineated characters as Charles Dickens pictured them in his unexpurgated story, in a few pages as it is represented has been done in the butchery of this classic story. What might Dickens have to say of this literary marvel, were it possible for him to return and live again. He would doubtless set about revising his "American Notes" and he would be less complimentary to America and Americans than he is in the original. That was about the time American publishers were printing his works without a cent of compensation for his hard labor. The treatment flavored his "American Notes." His conclusion no doubtless would be that instead of improving, we had grown worse.

The only excuse for condensing Dickens into a few hundred words is the hope it may help to revive and develop interest in his novels and give the newer generations a foretaste of the enjoyment and instruction which await them if they turn to the original. To offer a "boiled down" Dickens as a satisactory substitute, is nothing more than deception and sacrilege. As well cut a bit of canvas from a painting, reproduce that and offer it as having every distinguishing characteristic of the complete masterpiece.

NOTICE TO ALL DELINQUENTS TAXPAYERS ON PERSONAL PROPERTY

We publish herewith a ruling from theAttorney General on the law governing the sale of personal property for taxes.

The law governing the sale of personal property for taxes in Kent County.

The local law on the subject may be found in Article 15, Sections 152-156, Flack's Code of Public Local Laws. Section 154, relating to sales, was amended by Chapter 310, Acts of 1933, and authorizes a sale of the property of a delinquent, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to pay the taxes with interest and costs. The general method of procedure is set out in Article 81 Sections 189 and 190 of Bagby's Code of Public General Laws (1929 Suppl.) Section 190 indicates that sale of personal property may be either at the Court House door, or on the premises where the levy is made.

Under the Law I will advertise and sell all or enough of the personal propery of all delinquents for 1930-1931 on the premises where they were levied upon if taxes are not paid on or before June 20th. This means all personal property that has been levied upon for 1930-1931.
