LADY EMMA HAMILTON

A few days ago, I saw the lovely face of Lady Hamilton, painted by Romny, the great portrait painter of that day. Perhaps the artist idealized her robust and brilliantly colored beauty, but her vvacity and power of fascination cannot be doubted.

She was born n Cheshire Eng. the daughter of Henry Lyon, a blacksmith, ad her early life is obscure. After various vissitudes she came under the protection of the Hon. Charles Greville, who had her educated in a degree and she was taught to dance and sing and act in a professional manner. When she was twenty five years old she met Sir William Hamilton. He was greatly attracted by her and married her.

She soon became a great favorite in the easy going society of Naples and Queen Maria Carolina became closely attached to her.

In 1798 when every one was talking of the great victories of Nelson, the British hero, she desired to meet him and he at once became her devoted slave.

Her influence over him became notorious, and brought him under his country's displeasure. But he devotion continued in spite of all the protests of his friends. In 1803 Lord Hamilton died leaving his wife a large fortune, which she spent lavishly as her extravagance was notorious. Nelson was killed at the battle of Trafalgar, but in his will he left the fair Emma to his country asking that she might be cared for. But England was furious with her and she was shunned by the social set and was scorned by all her countrymen.

In 1813, though she and her daughter by Nelson were amply provided for, she was put in prison for debt, and finally she left England and went to Calais to take refuge from her creditors. She died in 1815 in great want, forgotten and neglected by the nation to whose care she was intrusted by the great Admiral.

Such is the history of the fair Lady Hamilton, whose pictures adorn the walls of so many Muscums and make more famous the Artist, Romny.

LEGENDS OF THE RHINE

Legends, although they cannot be proved to be true, yet they add romance and poetry to the history of any country.

Right now while so many are angry against Germany and the cruelty and despotism of Hitler, yet to this country we turn for music and legends.

The Rhine which is often a turgid stream, yet every where on its shores are castles and cathedrals which are full of poetic fancy.

Long time ago a friend who had just returned from a long trip up the Rhine presented me with the little book, Legends of the Rhine.

It tells some story of each of the Cathedrals and castles that one passed on the tour of that famous river.

The beautiful Cathedral of Aix La Chapelle is one of the places of interest along the way. The legend of its building is told thus: 'After spending vast sums, the council of the city met in despair. The Cathedral was still unfinished and there was no money to go on with the building. As they sat in council a strange figure appeared before them. 'I will furnish you the funds for the building,' he said, 'but this is my condition; the first, entering by the open door, on the day of the dedication of the Cathedral, belongs to me skin and hair and body and soul.' The Council was horrified. 'Get away from here evil one" they cried. But the bargainer insisted. He told them that they sent thousands to battle and many were slain, and here he asked for only one and should not one give himself for the good of many. So they consented and the evil one disappeared, but next day large bags of gold were found in the unfinished building. And so the work proceeded and finally the beautiful Cathedral was finished and the day of dedication drew near. There was a little pale faced priest who was seen to be very much down cast and many thought that he would be the one who would offer himself as a sacrifice. He spent much time in the woods and on the day before the great event, he was busy at the front door.

On the morning of the dedication the great doors were thrown opened and a huge wolf which was in a cage at the entrance sprang from his prison and ran over the threshold.

The Evil one seized the wolf, broke his neck and with a cry of rage banged the doors shut with such force that one of them was split. And at the same door is yet shown the imprint of a wolf's foot made in brass.

This legend seems very foolish to us in this enlightened age but in those early days the populace fully believed them.

RECIPES

Have you ever thought what delightful sances you can make of fruit juices. Combine several kinds, heat them and thicken with a little corn starch disolved in cold water.

Always open a can of Asparagus at the bottom thus saving the tender tips. And save the juice for soup.

Cream that refuses to whip will do so if one adds a chilled white to it and then beat it.

Cheese can always be kept fresh by wrapping it in a cloth satuarated with vinages.

Undercrust of custard pies are sure to be crisp if you scald the milk in a double boiler before adding it to the eggs.

Then start the pie of at 450 degrees to set the crust and after 15 minutes lower the temperature.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE— WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Yesent a substitute. 25c at drug stores. ©1931 C. M. Co.
