THIEVES ROB NOLAND'S STORE

ENTER THROUGH SKYLIGHT

Thieves entered Noland's Store on High street Wednesday night and stole merchandise valued at between $100 and $150.

Entrance was made by removing a glass from the sky light in the rear of the building and jumping to the floor.

From the merchadise stolen it is very apparent that the thieves were familiar with the store and a good judge of quality as only the highest priced goods was taken. Included in the articles stolen were silk hose, handkerchiefs, sweaters, cigars, cigarettes, candy, gloves, pencils, and $5 in cash.

The thieves apparently took their time in looting the store as the silk stockings were removed from the boxes and the empty boxes placed back on the shelf. An effort was made to open the rear door to carry the merchandise out but a large padlock stopped them and they left the same way they entered, through the sky light. A step ladder was used to carry the stolen goods out and from the quantity taken and the difficulty of lifting it through the skylight indicates that the theft was committed by more than one person.

Sheriff Vickers stated that the methods used indicate that the robbery was committeed by the same persons who robbed the store of Mr. Kennard Jones at Still Pond two weeks ago. The Sheriff is offering $250 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the store thieves.

The Labor Day week end was abundantly celebrated, and once more Kent county's weatherman upheld his record of 'something for every one.'

By Sunday all of the Chester River Yacht and Country Club golfers were eliminated from the matches, and Monday the weatherman sent weeping skies to mourn with the community.

On Saturday a dance was held in the club house, the highlight of which was the singing the John Charles Thomas.

A light breeze and clear skies on Sunday proved an almost ideal day for the boat races held off Deep Point for the Barnegat sneak boxes of the Chester River.

The Barnegat fleet now numbers 8; two belonging to the Woods Howard and Alice 6, one for Dr. Wilmer's boys, Bill Grieb, Gilbert Ingersol, Bill Baker, Hynson Rogers, and the Moyer boys.

The course was a triangular one, from the Elizabeth, the Wilmer yacht anchored above Deep Point as committee boat, and extending up the river almost to Quaker Neck Wharf, along the Queen Anne shore, across the river and back to the Elizabeth.

Starting off with a light breeze, a bit puffy, the boats straggled along a flood tide to the first turning point. Bill Grieb easily led around the turn followed, possibly two lengths beck, by Howard Wood.

'I don't understand that,' the watchers on Quaker Neck Wharf grumbled. 'That Wood's boat is fast. It surely ought to win.'

Then the unexpected happened. The breeze freshened and the second boat, catching it adroitly, shot ahead until its bow was level with the stern of the leading boat.

Grieb made a wide turn around the flag. At the same moment the tide turned and Wood cleverly shortening his turn, passed close to the stake boat on the inside.

Here the current ran especially fast and Wood took full advantage of it. The boat shot ahead. After that it was just a matter of going along to pass the finish line and capture the first prize.

Only a small gallery was present at Quaker Neck. The racing followers were at the finish line and could not see the dramatic incident where the race was really won.

The Barnegat fleet is a particularly colorful bit of Chester River sport. Each hull carries a distinctive color scheme which makes the boats easy to distinguish.

Variety, too, is found in their rigging. Five of the boats have a marconi rig, with jib and pointed mainsail, while three are cat rigged, with one irregularly four sided, gaff headed sail.

To the beholder, the racked masts give an illusion of skimming speed.

WOULD RELIEVE WORK BOAT GAS TAX

GOVERNOR RITCHIE MAKES PROMISE TO WATERMEN

Governor Ritchie, in the following telegram received this week, stated that, if elected, he will recommend a refund of the four cent gasoline tax on work boats. This tax in the past has been used by the Conservation Department for restocking oyster grounds. The telegram follows:

You are authorized to publish the following statement from me. 'Under the present law the motor boats used for pleasure are entitle to a refund from the state gasoline taxes paid by them. Work boats are not entitled under the present law to similar refunds. This discrimination against the work boats does not seem to me fair particularly when the owners of these boats have nearly all suffered very considerably from the depression. Therefore, if reelected, it is my intention to recommend to the nevt general assembly legislation giving the work boats the same right to a refund for the gasoline taxes paid by them such refund amounting to four cents per gallon.'

NOW AND THEN

SMILE

There is something in a smile
That no words of mine can tell,
It is like the magic wand
We find at the wishing well.
There is sunshine in a smile,
And its penetrating ways
Warm the heart that's hurt and sad,
Smooths the path o'er troubled ways.
And smiling keeps the corners of your mouth from turning down.
And shows a heart that's happy,
And a face that will not frown.
—Ruth A. Hartzell.

The above is surely true. One melts under the influence of a smile. It is said that a smile does not take near the amount of muscles as it does to frown. Smiles are like sunshine, frowns and gloom reminds one of clouds. Perhaps there was nothing that kept the boys courage up over seas more tha the song 'Smile, Smile, Smile.'

Are you going to the Circus to take the children? That is one time when the grown ups feel it is their duty to chaperone the young ones. Is it such a job after all? The spanking horses, the riders and the clowns to make every one laugh. And the music is always a drawing card. So do not fail to attend if the children go.
