There of us who have always felt that respect and honor should be shown to our rulers were distressed and mortified at the cartoon which appeared several weeks ago of the Roosevelt family and clientale. it portrays our president wearing a broad smile, with crown on his head and fishing rod in his hand while all of Mrs. Roosevelt's defects of teeth and chin are painfully emphazied. The President's two divorced children are shown, throwing their discarded mates into a waste basket. Morganthan, Johnson and the brain trust come in for their share of ribald jest, and spite.

This picture painted by some unknown artist, signing himself P. W. A. was sent to the West Chester Fine Arts Institute several weeks ago. It was very poorly painted in bright colors on a 4 ft. by 8 ft. canvass and was signed Jere Miah II's Night mare of 1934.

So many persons came to see the picture, such crowds jammed the halls and that the President of the Institute had it placed in a separate room and 25 cent was charged to see it. Some persons offered as much as $3,000 dollars for the picture, but these offers did not materilize. Last week, a laborer came to see the picture, paid his 25 cents and entered the room behind a giggling crowd of people. He stood some time looking at the painting, then pulling a bottle of paint remover from his pocket, splashed it all over the canvass then yanking it from the wall, he set fire to it. The flames was soon burnt out but the picture was ruined.

The crowd fled from the room screaming, and while, the head of the Institute were conferring as to which charge to bring against the criminal. he walked into the police station and gave himself up. Of course the reporters found him there.

His name was John Smiukse and he was a house painter. He told them he had a day off and he felt something must be done about that picture. It was a disgrace to the country to have such a picture on exhibition.

The police Judge sent the man who destroyed the picture to penitentiary for six months.

However it seems to many that he had finer feelings than the crowd who went to see it, or the officials who made money on the exhibition or such a picture.

EVANGELINE BOOTH

Evangeline Booth has at last triumphed and is made commander of the Salvation Army. She has been Commander of that organization in the United States for 30 years.

Being a daughter of the founder, Gen. William Booth she has always been identified with it and from the time when a sweet young girl of seventeen and she plead with them to give them first food and drink until now when at 69 she is the chosen leader, her heart and soul has been in the work to do for the poor direlects who by their own fault, or by misfortune are cast on the World's charity.

Miss Patsy Smith Hill was a kindergarten teacher. Feeling the need of a bright little tune for her children, she asked her sister, Mildred to write a little tune for her which she did. Then Miss Patsy put words to it and they had it copy-righted. It proved so popular that the tune was used to numberless different words. But last week. Sam H. Harris the great radio singer, composed a song to the tune. The words were 'As Thousand Cheer.' Now he is sued for the use of this popular tune. He is asked to pay $250 for every time he has used it. If he has to pay it will be more than $100,000.

HOUSEHOLD

Meats are going up in price everyday and hens like other labor, are going on a strike making eggs scarce. So what are house wives to do?

One answer is to can everything that is available. Lay in your store house the different things in cans and dried that the stores offer. Fruits and vegetables are fine.

HATS, HATS

Do you know that after having our last year hats made low crowned, the news comes from Paris that high hats are coming into vogue again? The reason because they are most becoming, and that is after all the most vital thing. So hold on to your old hats a little while, before you have them lowered.

SUITS

Suits seem to be the most popular dress for early fall wear. There are numberless styles and fabrics for blouses and shirt waists.

National Trees

According to the secretary of the British forestry commission, "there is no 'national tree' for Great Britain." But judging from the crests of the Royal English Forestry society and the Royal Scottish Forestry society, the oak tree has been adopted as an emblem by Great Britain, and the pine tree by Scotland. The Canadian legation at Washington states "no tree has been officially designated as a 'national tree.' However, the maple leaf is regarded as Canada's national emblem, and appears in the arms or ensigns armorial assigned to the Dominion by the royal proclamation of November 21, 1921. The particular variety of maple leaf is not therein described." . . . "However, the variety which appears in the arms is the Acer saccharinum, commonly known as the silver maple."

Building Panama Canal Originated With Spain

The thought of building a canal across the isthmus connecting North and South America originated with Spain in 1521, and some surveys were made at that time under the Spanish government, says the Indianapolis News. The serious business of building the canal, however, took shape in 1876 with the organization of a company in Paris which was to make the requisite surveys and investigations. Following an international scientific congress, in 1879, composed of 135 delegates from various nations, most of whom were French, which determined the site of the canal, a French company was formed which took up the work of construction on a large scale in 1883. Work on the canal was vigorously prosecuted until 1889, when the company became bankrupt under circumstances which produced charges of fraudulent transactions and of corruption upon a colossal scale. Suits were brought in the French courts against canal officials, including the president, contractors and others, who, it was charged, had benefited illegally in connection with the canal work. The property of the canal company was put in charge of a liquidator, and remained in his hands until 1894, when the new Panama canal company was organized and took over the assets of the old company. From 1894 until the property was acquired by the United States government, in May 1904, the new Panama canal company prosecuted the work of construction with a small force located almost entirely in the great Culebra cut.

Louisiana Lottery Was Last, Greatest of Kind

The Louisiana Lottery was founded in 1868 and it was said it sold $28,000,000 worth of tickets annually and paid out approximately half that amount each year. It was the last and the greatest of the lotteries.

The main offices of the "Louisiana," as it was called, were in the center of the city of New Orleans, in a pretentious looking building with opaque windows. In the courtyard was a shallow fountain, and in the pool of the fountain was a huge live alligator, viewed by opponents of the lottery as emblematic of the scheme. They claimed children of ticket buyers might as well be thrown to the alligator, instead of being beggared, as they inevitably would be.

The monthly drawing of the "Louisiana" was described as highly picturesque. Streets were crowded with ticket vendors, brokers and interested investors. The actual drawing took place in the old French opera house, before boxes occupied by fashionably dressed women. On the stage, acting as masters of ceremony and distributors of lucky chances, were two "commissioners," both well known Confederate war heroes. It was said they received between $15,000 and $30,000 a year for presiding over the ceremonies. One sat in a chair and received the prize tubes from a blindfolded boy, at every twentieth prize closing the wheel, from which the drawings were made, for the periodical stirring up that was ostensibly designed to guard against fraud. The other "commissioner," more than six feet tall, had a "wheel of fortune" of his own, much larger than the other, over which he presided.

Royal Clocks Valuable; There Are Many of Them

Windsor castle, says the Montreal Herald, has 360 clocks, Buckingham palace has more than 150. The inventory of the Windsor castle clocks alone fills two volumes in the Lord Chamberlain's office. The most valuable of them all is a small one that Henry VIII gave to Anne Boleyn on their wedding day. The weights are engraved with lovers' knots. It is said to be worth $50,000. Another valuable royal timepiece is a Louis XIV Buhl clock in the Van Dyck room at Windsor. It is said to be worth $25,000. There is also an Eighteenth century clock that requires winding only once a year. In the footmen's room at Windsor is a curious Act of Parliament clock. These timepieces sprang into existence when Pitt taxed watches, with the result that poor people ceased to carry them. Publicans came to their aid by installing Act of Parliament clocks in their windows. These clocks were of black-painted wood, with gilt numerals, and without glass over the dial.

The king's clock, however, is painted white. The largest of all the royal clocks is a grandfather, which stands in the grand corridor at Buckingham palace. It is 9 feet 10 inches in height.

Roll Call in Congress

There is no requirement that the roll be called at the beginning of each day's session of congress. It is called at the opening of the term to ascertain whether all the states are represented, and a roll call is directed by the speaker of the house or the president of the senate before an action which requires a two-thirds vote. For the rest of the time, a roll call may be had whenever any member cares to raise the point of no quorum, if a substantial minority supports his request. It requires 35 minutes to call the roll in the house; in the senate, considerably less time. When a part of one of the bodies desires to delay proceedings for one reason or another, frequent and repeated roll calls help to accomplish the purpose.

First Iron Ship

The earliest use of iron in shipbuilding, either for the frame or sheathing, was in 1816 when Thomas Wilson, a Scotch boatbuilder, began the construction of the Vulcan in Lanarkshire, Scotland. It maintained a passenger service for over half a century and was the pioneer of the iron and steel merchant marine. The first iron ship in this country was the John Randolph, riveted together at Savannah in 1834 of plates shipped from England. The old gunboat Wolverine, formerly the Michigan, was launched in 1843 and is the oldest iron-hulled ship afloat in the world. The Great Eastern, used as a cable-laying ship, was of iron.

Soldier Bonus Demands Traced to Indian Wars

The bonus for former warriors is as old as the Indian wars of the early settlers, according to an authority, who reviews the fight between the English settlers in Connecticut with the Pequots, which occurred in 1637.

The Pequots, most feared tribe in Connecticut, had subjugated the other Indians and the determination of the white settlers on a war, though they were inexperienced in Indian fighting, was a "remarkable action to take," the writer says.

The General court decided on the war at Hartford, May 1, 1637, and by July 13, the same year, the Indian power had been broken. The white men struck quickly, killing men, women and children as they drove the Indians from the state. Then came the aftermath, just as it has in modern days.

The Indian fighters demanded bonuses, and were given lands in the former country of the Pequots, now New London county. Taxes were increased and increased interest in preparation for other wars was noted. The leaders then fighting wrote their memoirs, and altercations arose as to who won the war.

IF YOUR BREATH HAS A SMELL YOU CAN'T FEEL WELL

When we eat too much, our food decays in our bowels. Our friends smell this decay coming out of our mouth and call it bad breath. We feel the poison of this decay all over our body. It makes us gloomy, grouchy and no good for anything.

What makes the food decay in the bowels? Well, when we eat too much, our bile juice can't digest it. What is the bile juice? It is the most vital digestive juice in our body. Unless 2 pints of it are flowing from our liver into our bowels every day, our movements get hard and constipated and ¾ of our food decays in our 28 feet of bowels. This decay sends poison all over our body every six minutes.

When our friends smell our bad breath (but we don't) and we feel like a whipped tomcat, don't use a mouthwash or take a laxative. Get at the cause. Take Carter's Little Liver Pills which gently start the flow of your bile juice. But if "something better" is offered you, don't buy it, for it may be a calomel (mercury) pill, which loosens teeth, gripes and scalds the rectum in many people. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name and get what you ask for—25¢. ©1934, C.M.Co.
