THE FIRST DIRECT appeal for the support of the Kent County ambulance will be made in the next week in the form of the sale of tickets to a benefit show to be staged at the New Lyceum Theatre October 10th, 11th and 12th. The price of the ticket is not a donation as the purchaser will receive in return an evening's entertainment to be staged by the pick of local talent under able directors. This show should receive the cooperation from every section of the county as the 700 trips made by the Kent County ambulance has included every community. The response of the public in purchasing tickets will largely determine whether the ambulance service will be continued as the Board of Control will be justified in judging whether the public desires this service continued by their willingness to support it. A little help by a large populace will assure ambulance service by those who may need it.

DOES LIFE BEGIN AT FORTY

'Life Begins at Forty' is the title of a new book and it's not supposed to be fiction. Yet most of us would agree that Strife begins at Frty. It's about that time a man stops growing on both ends and starts growing in the middle. He scrupulously watches his calories, eats his vitamins, and vigorously practices girth control, a few days each year. It's the period when he becomes mellow and philosophical, or else his milk of human kindness starts to sour and he gets cynical. He gets as suspicious of new business deals as a sparrow is of an auto salesman talking to a horse owner. He has given up the childish belief that Santa Claus lives at the North Pole, but has developed strong misgivings he hangs out at the voting polls. He has learned that all are not girls that giggle and that few women ever reach 40. They tarry at 21 several years, stop at 32 a while, and then jump between 50 and 60 in one leap. In her battle against time and kitchen wear and tear, she may pull out stray gray hairs, get a henna rinse, suffer through a reducing diet, and exercise off curves in the wrong places, but she can wisely smile when He says: 'I'm just as good a man as I was 20 years ago, an' I eat an' do as I please. I don't notice a bitta difference.' But then,

'There isn't much to life but this:
A baby's smile, a woman's kiss,
A book, a pipe, a fire, a friend,
And just a little cash to spend.'

WOMEN ON A BOAT ARE BAD LUCK

The sailors superstitions, back in the days of sailing ships, was proved to be right this year.

The Endeavor was generally acknowledged to be the fastest boat, outclassing the Rainbow. She won two races, and then the jinks popped up.

Superstitions are only a form of twisted reasoning, a wrong understanding of cause and effect. From all accounts it would appear that the Skipper did more to lose the race than his wife.

Without doubt the Endeavor was badly handled. Mrs. Sopwith was part of the crew, and probably did a good job of timing which was intrusted to her. At any rate nothing was said adversely about her on the radio. A great deal was broadcast about clumsy handling of the Endeavor's spinnaker, and other routine matters.

The last race was lost by poor seamanship, ignorant handling of the wheel. Radio announcers and newspaper reports were guarded and polite in their remarks. It would have been interesting to have heard what they really wanted to say.

It looked for a time as though a repetition of the Lord Dunraven fiasco might occur.

Sopwith was not the highest type of sportsman, and some of his tactics were questionable.

American loved Sir Thomas Lipton, the New York Yacht Club struck the name of Lord Dunraven from its rolls, and Sopwith is not overly admired.

Why does not England send one of her splendid sportsmen instead of nouveau riche. Sopwith made his millions in war profiteering, and until a few years ago was not a yachtsman.

A yachtsman, like a circus trapeze performer, must be trained to be a yachtsman from babyhood.

Our defender, Mr. Howard Vanderbilt has been racing ocean racing craft for 40 years. He knows how to pick, to train and to handle a crew. He leaves nothing to chance, and he deserved to win because he and his crew worked for it.

In preparation for the fifth race, the Rainbow was pulled out of water, her copper bottom polished with fine emory, and completey overhauled. Vincent Aster is credited with labeling the Rainbow '127 feet of concentrated trouble.' A hair trigger crew did the rest.

Cameron King explained that the choice of a 30 mile triangular course with 10 miles on each leg of the triangle is always used for the International races because the first race in which the America captured the cup was so sailed. Rather typical American sentiment, that!

Reporters numbering 110 covered the races for newspapers throughout the world. Those reporters assigned to file radio bulletin on the progress of the races were on the Coast Guard Cutters Mendota and Argo and the R. C. A. Norsaga.

Fleet and crowd stories were collected from the decks of the Mendota.

The most interesting newspaper man was Harry V. Spurr, dubbed 'the most expensive correspondent.'

Representing the Australian Broadcasting Company, Spurr cost his employers $1.98 for every word he sent.

His report went to the Sydney office of the Australian Broadcasting Company and from there was broadcast to every part of the Australian continent.

Eight newspaper men were from Great Britain, and five from Canada. The rest of the 110 were from the newspaper of the U. S. A.

Telegraph companies found it necessary to send 60 men to handle the newspaper men's reports.
