JANET GAYNOR—as she appears in "Servants' Entrance," her newest starring picture for Fox. 2PA

A dual personality has persistently remained with Janet Gaynor, from the time in her early girlhood when she played tom-boy during the better part of the day with her pals of the Philadelphia and Chicago street games, to her latest asignment in 'Servants' Entrance' which come to the New Lyceum on Monday and Tuesday, October 1 and 2, a role which also demanded two characterizations of her—namely, a rich and a poor girl.

But turning from a pampered, rich heiress, as she must in her new film with Lew Ayres, into a common scullery kitchen maid was something else. She began to sympathize with all the kitchen maids in the world, with dishes piled greasy and high from feastings they never shared.

In spite of the fact that she apprentices herself into the role of a poor house-servant in order to qualify as a housewife in her new film assignment, the line between rich and poor which she must cross again and again in the picture calls for a craftsmanship in acting technique more demanding perhaps than any Miss Gaynor has essayed heretofore.

With Lew Ayres as the chauffeur of a wealthy family, Miss Gaynor is cast as a servant in the same household.

A new starring romantic team is presented to film audiences in Paramount's 'Now and Forever,' coming on Wednesday and Thursday, October 3 and 4 to the Ney Lyceum Theatre. It is Gary Cooper and Carole Lombard, and the picture marks the first time that these two popular players have appeared together as leads. In addition, five year old Shrley Temple, who was seen n 'Little Miss Marker,' plays a starring role.

Together, these three compose one of the most perfect combinations seen in films. The characters they play are sympathetic, human and entirely believable, and they enact a story that is sincere, with loads of heart-tugs and tears along with the smiles and laughs.

W. C. Fields' new comedy picture for Paramount, 'The OldFashioned Way,' is coming on Friday and Saturday, October 5 and 6 to the New Lyceum Theatre.

This comedy, which has for its theme the adventures and mishaps of an old-time stock troupe, presents Fields as a back-woods Barrymore, the manager, romantic lead and chief support of a hungry troupe of players who are always one jump ahead of the sheriff and three weeks behind in their pay.

Baby LeRoy, who played with Fields in 'Tillie and Gus,' has a featured spot with his old rival, and acts the role of the infant son of the town's wealthiest widow, a lady who becomes infatuated with Fields. She furnishes enough financial support for him to put on one final performance. It ends with his leaving town followed by the sheriff in hot pursuit.

Joe Morrison, famous for his rendition of the popular song, 'The Last Round-Up,' is in a featured role, together with Judith Allen and Jack Mulhall.

An unusual feature of this film is a complete film version of 'The Drunkard,' the popular melodrama that has been running in Los Angeles and New York for months. The cast of this unique stage play is carried over into the picture, and Jan Duggan, one of its players, has the role of the wealthy widow in the film.

'The Old-Fashioned Way' was directed by William Beaudine from a screen play by Garnett Weston and Jack Cunningham.

"Nerves" "NERVES" "Nerves"

Dr. Miles NERVINE "Did the work" says Miss Glivar WHY DON'T YOU TRY IT?

After more than three months of suffering from a nervous ailment, Miss Glivar used Dr. Miles Nervine which gave her such splendid results that she wrote us an enthusiastic letter.

If you suffer from "Nerves." If you lie awake nights, start at sudden noises, tire easily, are cranky, blue and fidgety, your nerves are probably out of order.

Quiet and relax them with the same medicine that "did the work" for this Colorado girl.

Whether your "Nerves" have troubled you for hours or for years, you'll find this time-tested remedy effective.
