SQUADRON LOG

BY THE STOWAWAY

The big current excitement at the Chester River Yacht and Country Club is the annual Golfer's dinner held in the club house on Friday evening.

By way of a change the dinner is to be a stagg affair genuinely stagg. An outside caterer will serve the dinner. For once the sweethearts and wives will have a night off.

Heretofore, stagg dinners have been stagg in name only. The women of the family worked like dogs to cook and serve dinners at which their lords and masters only sat down to eat. Needless to say, the dinners were excellent.

As a breathing spell for wifie and a chance for hubby to go excessively masculine, the old stagg dinners just were not. There was no pleasant, mild stimulation next morning following the relaxation of a short vacation from the spouce. Instead hubby had a grouch because he never got a chance to tell the rich story he had been saving up for the dinner, and wifie was tired and cross, and her feet ached.

All that is to be changed. Only Charlie Eskman and the Voshell House staff will be entitled to grouch about aching feet on Saturday morning.

One thing is sure. Unless Eshman serves a dinner equal to the superlative banquets the ladies prepared, this genuine stagg dinner will be the last. Next year the ladies will be back on the job, maybe. Once released from a job they probably would rather not have, the fair ones may balk at resuming operations.

The emancipation of women has a dark side.

To the golfers, greeting! Let joy be unrefined!

Did you ever notice the anchor at the foot of the flag pole before the Chester River Yacht and Country Club house? Have you ever wondered why it is there?

Taken from a shipwreck off Rock Hall, years ago, the anchor was an object of veneration among the watermen. An aura of adventure surrounded it, and a spirit of thrift and ingenuity fired the imaginations of young and old with a desire to put the anchor to use.

No matter how many new boats came to Rock Hall, there never was one to fit the anchor. It was disturbing to see so fine a bit of salvage lying idle and useless.

When the Chester River Yacht Club built the pier, the lumber used in the construction was from the old bridge. An unsightly pile of timber remained after the pier was finished. Club members demanded that the pier committee remove the eye sore, and the job of doing so fell on the ample choulders of Doc Hughes.

Something for nothing is contrary to the Dctor's philosophy. So when some men from Rock Hall agreed to take the timber, Doc out-bartered the Barter Lady.

'What will you give me?' he demanded.

'An anchor,' the men replied.

'What kind of an anchor?' Doc persisted.

'A good anchor,' offered one man.

'An historic anchor,' replied another more gifted in salesmanship.

The bargain was struck, and in due time the anchor arrived. Doc looked at it and scratched his head. Just what kind of boat would use an anchor like that! The Doctor's problem was not unlike that which had tormented Rock Hall watermen for fifty years.

But Dr. Hughes was resourceful. He had the anchor placed before the flag pole and treated to a shining coat of aluminum paint.

Before remonstrances could be wired, the Doctor pointed proudly to the anchor and exclaimed:

'Ladiesand gentlemen, behold the beautiful ornament for the Club lawn!'

And, belive it or not, the idea went over big with the club.
