THE BEATLES AND CHESAPEAKE BAYS

YOUR DOG AND MINE

By EDWARD C. LOUD, JR.

As in the previous article, I shall try to discuss the standard by which all good Beagles and Chesapeakes are measured.

Skull of the Beagle—Should be fairly long, slightly domed at the occiput, with cranium broad and full.

Ears of the Beagle—Ears set on moderately low, long, reaching when drawn out nearly, if not quite, to the end of the nose; fine in texture, fairly broad—with almost entire absence of erectile power—setting close to the head, with the forward edge slightly inturning to the cheek—rounded at the cheek.

Muzzle of the Beagle—Muzzle of medium length—straight and square cut—the stop moderately defined.

Jaws of the Beagle—Level. Lips free from flaws; nostrils large and open. Defects—A very flat skull, narrow across the top; excess of dome; eyes small; sharp and terrier like, or prominent and protruding; muzzle long, snipy or cut away decidely below the eyes, or very short. Roman nosed, or upturned, giving a dishface expression. Ears short, set on high or with a tendency to rise above the point of origin.

Neck and throat of the Beagle—Neck rising free and light from the shoulders, strong in substance yet [illegible]loaded, or medium length. The th[illegible] clean and free from folds of skin; a slight wrinkle below the angle of the jaw, however, may be allowable. Defects—A thick, short, cloddy neck carried on a line with the top of the shoulders. Throat showing dewlap and flds of skin to a degree termed 'throatness.'

Shoulders and chest of the Beagle—Shoulders sloping—clean, muscular, not heavy or loaded—conveying the idea of freedom of action with activity and strength. Chest deep and broad, but not broad enough to interfere with the free play of the shoulders. Defects—straight, upright shoulders. Chest disproportionally wide or with lack of depth.

Back, loin, and ribs of the Beagle—Back short, muscular and strong. Loin broad and slightly arched, and ribs well sprung, giving plenty of lung room. Defects—Very long or swayed or roached back. Flat, narrow loin. Flat ribs.

Forelegs of the Beagle—Straight, with plenty of bone in proportion to the size of the dog. Pasterns short and straight.

Feet of the Beagle—Close, round and firm. Pad full and hard. Defects—Out at elbows. Knees knuckled over forward, or bent backword. Forelegs crooked. Feet long, open or spreading.

Hips and thighs of the Beagle—Strong and well musled, giving abundance of propelling power. Stifles strong and well let down. Hocks firm, symmetrical and moderately bent. Feet close and firm. Defects—Cow hocks, or straight hocks. Lack of muscle a nd propelling power. Open feet.

Tail of the Beagle—Set moderately high; carried gaily, but not turned forward over the back; with sight curve; short as compared with the size of the dog; with brush. Defects—Long tail. Teapot curve or inclined forward from the root. Rat tail with absence of brush.

Coat of the Beagle—A close, hard, hound coat of medium length. Defects—A short, thin coat, or of soft quality.

Height of the Beagle—Not to exceed 15 inches, measured across the back at the point of the withers, the dog standing in a natural position with his feet well under him.

Color of the Beagle—Any true hound color.

General Appearance of the Beagle—A miniature foxhound solid and big for his inches, with the wear and tear look of the dog that can last in the chase and follow his quarry to the death.

Head of the Chesapeake Bay—Skull broad and round with medium stop, nose medium short muzzled pointed but not sharp. Lips thin, not pendulous. Ears small, set well up on head, hanging loosely and medium leather. Eyes medium large, very clear of yellowish color and wide apart.

Neck of the Chesapeake Bay—Of medium length with a strong muscular appearance, tapering to shoulders.

Shoulders, chest, and body of the Chesapeake Bay—Shoulders sloping and should have full liberty of action with plenty of power without any restrictions of movement. Chest strong, deep and wide. Barrel round and deep. Body of medium length, neither cobby or roached, but rather approaching hollowness, flanks well tucked up.

Back, stifles and quarters of the Chesapeake Boy — Back quarters should be trifle higher than shoulders, they should show fully as much power as the forequarters. There should be no tendency to weakness either in fore or hindquarters.

Legs, elbows, hocks, and feet of the Chesapeake Bay—Legs should be medium length and straight, showing good bone and muscle, with well webbed hare feet of good size. The toes well rounded and close pasterns slightly bent and both pasterns and hocks medium length—the straighter the legs the better.

Stern of the Chesapeake Bay—Tail should be medium length varying from: Males 12 inches to 15 inches, and females from 11 inches to 14 inches; medium heavy at base, moderate, feathering on stern permissible.

Coat and texture of the Chesapeake Bay—Coat should be thick and short, nowhere over one and one-half inches long, with a dense fine wooly undercoat. Hair on face and legs should be very short and straight with a tendency to wave on the shoulders, neck back and loins only. The curly coat or coat with a tendency t curl not permissable.

Color of the Chesapeake Bay—Should be as near dead grass as possible, varying from a tan to a faded brown. The liver color is not permissible, the dead grass or faded brown being correct. A white spot on breast and toes permissible.

Weight of the Chesapeake Bay—Males, 65 to 75 pounds; females, 55 to 65 pounds.

Height of the Chesapeake Bay—Males, 23 to 26 inches, females, 21 to 24 inches.
