The Social Wanderer

The mad rush is on, and I find it hard to collect my thoughts this week to write you a sensible chronicle of the week's escapades. Everywhere I go, the first question tendered me is, 'Are you ready for Christmas?' My invariable reply is, 'I am not,' and then there is much ah-ing and oh-ing with replies of 'I am' and a few 'I am nots.' Since last Saturday, when Mr. and Mrs. Scott Beck threw such an elegant party to celebrate their twenty-fifth wedding aniversary, I have stepped so fast and furiously, the ordeal of shopping has been thrust aside and if I don't get busy, it will be the night before Christmas and I will be stirring, though not even a mouse.

But to go back to the party, everyone had the grandest kind of a time, the music was fine, and the old town clock tolled three as the strains of Home Sweet Home were danced by many tired but happy feet. Swarms of out of town people were here, and all day Sunday there was much running in and out, calling on the visitors and exchange of greetings. Mrs. Phil Wilmer entertained Mr. and Mrs. Beck's guests Sunday afternoon, followed by a buffet supper given by Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Kibler at five o'clock. Needless to say, Monday held the usual let down feeling that ensues such a week end. The laundries, being extra heavy, had to be gotten up, rearranginging of this and that, and all the prosaic details that all housewives find confronting them on Mondays.

However, on Tuesday, we found ourselves rested and more or less straight. By Tuesday night, we were quite ready to be out again and spent a most delightful evening at Mrs. Harry Clay Brown's dinner and bridge. The house was beautifully decorated with flowers and lighted Christmas wreaths and candles. Place cards and tallies were drawn from a Christmas tree while each individual table for four held a center piece of a tiny lighted Christmas tree. The entire color scheme throughout the evening was red and green. Mrs. Brown's second party on Wednesday evening was equally colorful and pretty, I understand. The old saying, 'it never rains but it pours' was certainly in effect this week for on Wednesday at noon, several cars were seen leaving town headed for Smyrna, Del. The ladies were en route to the Wayside Inn, where Mrs. Dudley G. Rowe and Mrs. John F.Stokes entertained at luncheon and bridge. A most attractive party it was. Red candles, tallies and place cards a la Christmas, poinsettas, made the cozy tea room an enticing place to spend a cold December afternoon. We had the pleasure of meeting many Wilmington ladies, who were very charming. However, I noted at the end, most of the Chestertown guests were carrying prizes home.

Mrs. Frank Goodwin was hostess at a bath room shower on Thursday afternoon for Miss Barbee Humphreys. Barbee is being extensively entertained these days and has been the recipipient of many attractive gifts.

But enough of parties! Who's been travelling? The farthest I've heard of anyone going is Baltimore, but that's a pretty nice place, after all. Among those who have recently spent a few days in Oricle City are: Mrs. Roland Corey, Mrs. Simon Westcott, who were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Austin Shure, Mrs. Jack Stenger, Mr. and Mrs. Dorsey Hines, who by the way will have Mr. and Mrs. Albert Weaver as their guests for this week end, Mrs. Frank B. Hines and Mrs. C. Beck Jones. Mrs. Jones and her father have opened up and moved into their new apartment in the home of Mrs. Fleming on Water St.

Mrs. Harrison Cooke, and her little daughter, who have been with Mrs. A. T. H. Harper for the past ten days, returned on Thursday to their home in Elizabeth, N. J. Mr. Cooke came last week end in order to attend the party with Mrs. Cooke on Saturday night.

Had I longer to chat, my wracked brain might turn over a few more items, but chores are beckoning and I must be away to their fulfillment. I do want to see Santa Claus,

Ever thine,
THE WANDERER.

Mrs. E. P. L. Bell suffered a broken ankle on Monday of this week when she fell on the stairs at her home in the Imperial Hotil Apartments.

She was treated by Dr. F. B. Hines and taken to Easton hospital where an X-Ray picture was taken. She is now resting comfortably at her home.

OLIVER—POTTS

Announcement was made this week of the marriage of Mrs Ada B. Oliver, formerly of Church Hill, to Mr. James B. Potts, of McGinnes Corner on December 1st by Rev. Howrd Covey, of Chestertown.

The bride was gowned married in a beautiful shade of Lemon and they were accompanied by a few friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Mench, of Worton, his sister, Mrs. Ida Chalfant, of Pittsburg; Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland Porter, of Chestertown; Mr. and Mrs. William Mench, of Broad Neck; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Mench, of Rock Hall; spent Sunday between Newark and Wilmington at their brother and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. George Mench.

Sidney Brown, son of Mr. and Mrs. Foster Brown was taken to Easton Hospital and had both tonsils and adenoids removed and at this writing he is doing very well.

Mrs. Nell Westcott had as her guest recently Miss Barbara Upjohn of New York City.

Judge W. Mason Shehan presided at the term of Court last Monday. It was his first appearance in court as presiding Judge.

Dr. Jomes M. Hepbron, director of Baltimore Community fund after attending the National Conference of Community Chests in New York spent Sunday as guest of Mrs. Wm. E Moody on Washington Ave. Mr. Raymond Moody accompanied him to the National Crime Conference in Washington.

Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Hubbard motored to Baltimore Friday where they attended a League of Nations dinner. From there they will go to Washington
