"BEHOLD MY WIFE."

Here is the artist's impression of the two principals in Paramount's "Behold My Wife," which comes on Wednesday and Thursday, December 26 and 27 to the New Lyceum Theatre. Sylvia Sidney is the star, while Gene Raymond, her leading man, is featured with M. B. Warner, Laura Hope Crews and Juliette Compton. The picture, a B. P. Schulberg production, was directed by Mitchell Leisen.

An entertaining blend of drama and comedy on the subjects of office life and love, Paramount's 'One Hour Late,' comes to the New Lyceum on Monday and Tuesday, December 24 and 25, with Joe Morrison, Helen Twelvetrees and Conrad Nagel in the leading featured roles.

The picture, which has its exciting climax in a stalled office elevator, tells the love story of two ordinary people, played by Morrison and Miss Twelvetrees.

Proposes for Spite

Morrison has an extraordinary singing voice, very little ambition and a desire to marry Miss Twelvetrees. But she won't see things his way until he makes a radio star of himself.

As a result of one of their numerous quarrels, she accepts an invitation from her boss to accompany him down to his country place for the week-end. And Morrison, to spite her, proposes to Hazel, another girl in the office.

Resentful and determined to go their separate ways, they enter an elevator that contains, among others, the boss' wife coming to tell him that she loves another man; the executive of a radio station, and a lady suffering from a weak heart.

Becomes a Hero

The elevator starts, then suddenly, as a cable breaks, comes to a halt between floors. There is an exciting and dramatic half hour, and when they emerge from the elevator Morrison is a hero, possessor of a radio contract and engaged to Miss Twelvetrees. While the boss' wife is cured of her ideas and poor Hazel left to go to dinner with a soda clerk.

Supporting the leading characters in the film are Arline Judge, Gail Patrick, Edward Craven and Toby Wing.

The dramatic story of revenge that turns into genuine love is the underlying theme of B. P. Schulberg's new Paramount picture, 'Behold My Wife,' starrink Sylvia Sidney with Gene Raymond and coming on Wednesday and Thursday, December 26 and 27, to the New Lyceum Theatre.

'Behold My Wife,' which presents Miss Sidney as a beautiful full-blooded Indian girl, has backgrounds in colorful primitive New Mexico, and urbane and sophisticated New York.

The story is concerned with Gene Raymond's attempt to revenge himself on his ultra-aristocratic family. Driven to New Mexico, when his family's meddling forces his sweetheart to suicide, he is wounded and nursed back to health by Sylvia Sidney.

Marries Indian Girl

She falls in love with her patient and he prevails upon her to marry him and accompany him back home, visualizing his family's horror when they meet her.

His plans go awry, however, when she appears at a reception given in her honor, more beautiful and fascinating than any of the well-bred women who surround her. It is then that he betrays his real purpose to her and tells her that he does not love her Broken hearted and desperate, she runs away with another man.

With her disappearance Raymond realizes that he really loves her. Urged by his family, who have had a change of heart, he follows her to the home of the other man only to discover that he has been killd and that she has confessed to his murder.

H. B. Warner Featured

In a dramatic and surprising climax, Miss Sidney is cleared of the charge of murder; she and Raymond admit their love to each other and go free for a happy life together.

'Behold My Wife' was directed by Mitchell Leisen from a screen story by William R. Lipman and Oliver LaFarge. The picture features, in the principal supporting roles, H. B. Warner, Laura Hope Crews, Juliette Compton and Charlotte Granville.

'It's A Gift,' the newest Paramount film to star W. C. Fields, bulbous-nosed comedian, comes to the New Lyceum on Friday and Saturday, December 28 and 29.

Norman McLeod, who has directed some of Hollywood's best comedies, guided the noted comedian through his laugh tricks in this film, which has Baby LeRoy once again teamed with Fields.

The story opens up in a small grocery store in New Jersey. If it were not for the customers, the boss, played by Fields, could loaf all day. One of his chief worries is Baby LeRoy who can't resist the tendency to destroy everything he sees.

However, Fields' problems are practically solved when he inherits an orange grove in California. Anyway, he thinks, he will have more room in which to loaf. So he packs the family in his broken down automobile for a 3000 mile jaunt to the coast, only to learn that his orange grove is just a huge lemon.

The manner in which Fields, through dumb luck, brings wealth to his family and himself, furnishes the comedy climax of the film.

Besides Baby LeRoy, the comedian is supported by Kathleen Howard, Jean Rouverol, Julian Madison, Tammany Young ,Morgan Wallace and Charles Sellon.

The original story is credited to Charles Bogle and J. P. McEvoy, and the screen play was written by Jack Cunningham.

In the days of silent pictures Willam Farnum and Mary Carr were names to conjure with. Both occupied the spotlight of fame. Farnum won his way to high favor with picture audiences as he had with those of the stage, portraying virile, out-of-door heroes who fought and loved with equal vigor. His battle with Tom Santschi in 'The Spolers' is still the standard for screen conflict. Mary Carr will be recommend for many heart touching portrayals. Outstanding among them will be 'Over the Hill.'

Both of these well-played characters are to be seen in RKO-Radio's 'The Silver Streak,' currently comes on Friday and Saturday, December 28 and 29, to the New Lyceum Theatre. Their presence in the picture blends the old with the new, the talking screen with the silent, and modern day transportation with that of early railroading.

Featured in the picture is the swift, new streamline train of the Burlington 'Zephyr-Silver Streak.'

The cast, in addition to Farnum and Mary Carr, includes Sally Blane, Charles Starrett, Hardie Albright, Theodor von Eltz, Edgar Kennedy, Irving Pichel and Doris Dawson.
