NEGRO KILLED BY AUTOMOBILE

TWO OTHER AUTOMOBILES RUN OVER BODY

George Tiller, 50 year old negro, was killed last Saturday night when apparently hit by an automobile on the Kennedyville-Morgnec road last Saturday night.

Mr. Ben Towner, while returning to his home in Morgnec from the Tolchester boat saw the body in the middle of the road too late to stop and the axle of his automobile hit the man's head as he passed over him.

Mr. Towner stated that a low mist was hanging along the ground and that there were a number of small piles of straw lying along the road dropped from farmers wagons. He thought the body was a pile of straw until it was too late to stop. Following the accident he turned his car around so as to get the light from the head lights of his car and found the colored man there apparently dead. He immediately returned to the scene and found that another car driven by Mr. Lindy, of Morgnec, had hit the body, badly mutilating it.

Coroner Harry L. Dodd summoned a Coroner's Jury and following an inquest arrived at a verdict that George Tiller met his death on December 22nd as a result of a fractured skull and other injuries, both internal and external, such injuries having been inflicted by a hit and run driver not known to the jury.

From the testimony the Coroner's Jury was convinced that the man had been hit by an automobile before Mr. Towner hit him. It was reported that Tiller was seen in a staggering drunken condition about 6 p. m. which was 45 minutes before Mr. Towner hit him. Both Mr. Towner and Mr. Lindy stopped and reported their accident and were not held responsible for the man's death.

Tiller was employed at the farm of Mr. Charles Miller in Morgnec and left the Miller farm at noon on Saturday.

Owner Must Be Sensible If He Expects Wise Dog

If obedience is essential for the dog, to get it the owner must display good qualities, too, asserts a writer in the Washington Star.

The first of these is patience, and still more patience.

This is all the more necessary for the man or woman who is not by nature a born trainer. There are few of these, as stated; the average human being will not find training, either of self or others, easy, but will be helped by a conscious grasp of the theory and practice of patience.

The second essential is determination. Call it perseverance, if you want to. Whatever one calls it, it is the same, and the need for it is thoroughly understood, especially with a stubborn dog.

The third need is kindness.

The animal nature in the human must never meet the animal nature of the dog, but must substitute for it that true kindness which does not permit anger, ire, choler, impatience, to enter in.

Then there is a fourth quality, difficult to name, but comparatively easy to describe, in that it is simply the ability to give praise when due, and the bravery to give reproof when deserved.

With man or beast, this is a rare quality, but in training the dog it is the true proof of the pudding. Like obedience itself, it pleases the dog, sets him up in his own esteem, and helps make the world a better place for him and all concerned.

Turn All Statues Toward Easter Islanders' Graves

In some long-ago era of hustling energy, Easter islanders turned out statuary by the ton. Using volcanic craters on the island as quarries, the people carved out heads and torsos—little fellows 3 feet high, big fellows 20, 30 feet, even one giant 70 feet tall. Both men and women were portrayed, writes Emily C. Davis, in the Washington Star.

They had a pattern for their art, and they stuck to it. The stone faces had to have long noses, disdainful mouths, jutting eyebrows.

In another quarry, workers ran a stone hat factory, hewing out a red-tinted stone for top hats to adorn the heads of gray stone giants. A red hat for a 30-foot giant would weigh full three tons.

When an image was finished, the workers slid it down the hillside, and then somehow pulled or pushed the statues—some weighed as much as 40 tons—to an appropriate site. All the faces were made to turn inland, toward the graves of Easter island's dead.

Puritans' Footgear

Shoes were brought to America by the first settlers. The Indians wore moccasins and the white men adopted them until Thomas Beard, a London shoemaker, came to Massachusetts in 1629, bringing a supply of leather, as well as a kit of tools, and became the first shoemaker on record in the colony. Puritans wore plain, square-toe shoes with buckles. Cavaliers wore great boots. Men of the Colonial and early Revolutionary period wore long stockings and low shoes with buckles. Women had one pair of coarse shoes for week-day wear and a pair of fine kid shoes for Sunday best. Farmers wore kneehigh boots of heavy cowhide leather. Children's shoes were crude; in some cases the father's old boots were cut apart and made over into shoes for children.

Fishy Facts

Nine hundred thousand tons of coal are used to catch the 200,000 tons of fish landed at Grimsby every year, where the largest ice factory in the world turns out 1,200 tons of ice a day. Brought from the farthest parts of the North Sea, the landings begin at 5 a. m. every weekday morning on the "pontoon," which is the name for the concrete market. The fish is auctioned from north to south, cleaned and frequently filleted, boxed in ice and packed in the vans of express night trains to catch the early morning markets at Billingsgate in London and elsewhere.—Tit-Bits Magazine.

Efficiency

Nothing inherent in the word efficiency appertains to morals or moral conduct. It merely connotes competency, ability to perform a definite function adequately, skilfulness. There is no reason why a given murder, robbery, or other crime could not be described as efficient. It is possible that excessive indulgence in any demoralizing course might impair temporarily or permanently the efficiency of any man; in which event he would no longer be termed efficient.—Literary Digest.

Buenos Aires, Argentina . . . An expenditure of 406,000 pesos has been made during this year on the improvement of telephone service in the city of Avellaneda. Of this sum, according to Foreign Communications News, 315,000 pesos have been for the installation of dial exchange equipment and the remainder for cable extensions.
