The Social Wanderer

Dear Roamer:

Well, I have never heard of so many weddings going on. Hardly a week goes by unless we hear of one; either a surprise or one that we antcipated. Last Saturday, when it was too late to stick it in my letter, I learned of the marriage of Mrs. Carolene Hynson du Pont to Clifton Miller, of Long Island. It came as truly a big surprise to me although I had been hearing rumors of a wedding that would give us a shock. I have never met the lucky bridegroom, although I did see him New Year's Eve when he escorted the then Mrs. du Pont to the dance at the Country Club. The wedding took place quietly last Friday in New York, after which they sailed for an European honeymoon headed toward Italy first, I believe, and will not return until March. Mrs. Miller, you know is the owner of Hinchingham, that perfectly lovely historical estate which overlooks the Bay. I understand they intend to live in New York during the week, spending the week ends here. Mr. Miller is extremely fond of fox hunting and will probably take advantage of the fields that offer themselves to that sport, while in this neighborhood.

Mr. and Mrs. Browne Metcalfe Roe, better known as Barbee and Bus, have returned from their honeymoon and are now established at the Baldwin Apartments.

And while still on the marital topic, we learn that the marriage of Miss Enna Baxter to Mr. Harry Wilson Lewis will take place on February 11th at six o'clock in Christ M. P. Church, followed by a reception at the home of the bride's parents.

Two parties in honor of Miss Catharine Beck are planned for next week. One will be a luncheon bridge given by Mrs. Frank B. Hines and the other will be an evening bridge party given by Miss Margaret Smith, of Baltimore, who will be one of the attendants in the wedding. The party will be given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Beck. 'Mr. Jimmy' has not been very well lately, and visited a doctor in Baltimore this week for observation.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur W. Hubbard attended the Diplomatic Reception at the White House last week and on Sunday Mrs. Hubbard will give a luncheon for about sixty guests at the Mayflower Hotel where she and Mr. Hubbard have a suite for the winter.

Mrs. A. T. H. Harper who has been visiting her grand daughter, Mrs. Harrison Cooke in Elizabeth, N. J., has returned to her home on Water St. Miss Nancy Jean Usilton returned Thursday after a two weeks' visit in Pennsylvania. I am mighty glad to tell you that Mrs. T. B. Kilbourne who has been in Baltimore under treatment has returned to her home much improved. Mrs. C. Beck Jones accompanied her guest of last week, Miss Frances Nolting, to Baltimore on Monday returning on Wednesday with Mrs. Mason Wood, who you'll remember as Lois Bryan, probably, Mrs. Wood stayed until Friday before returning to Baltimore.

But now, I must be on my way, put on my snow shoes and tramp the country wide. Once again I apologize for brevity,

Yours for more news,

THE WANDERER

Mrs. Arthur Brice has returned from a visit with relatives in Baltimore.

The members of the I. U. congregation are worshipping with the congregation in Betterton for the winter months as has been thir custom for the past several years.

The latest report from Mr. Howard Turner is that he is not quite so well. He is now at the home of his brother, Mr. William Turner.

The condition of Mr. Hough Gooding who was also stricken with paralysis, in October, is improving. He was able to go for a short ride this week.

Falkland Islands Lonely British Empire Outpost

Among the lonely outposts of the British empire, the Falkland islands are among the most southerly; situated about three hundred miles off the east coast of South America. The stormy waters which wash around Cape Horn, beat against the southwestern shores, and few indeed are the mariners who visit these islands.

Two large islands, known as East and West Falkland, and a cluster of about one hundred smaller ones, make up the group. They were discovered in 1592 by John Davis. A French colony was settled there in 1763, and the islands were later held by the English and then the Spanish. They have been held by Britain since 1833.

The British population is comparatively small, and the colony's chief contribution to the British empire is the service it renders as a coaling station for the British warships of the South Atlantic squadron.

The chief city is Stanley, which is situated on East Falkland island; and the seat of government is located there. Attached to the colony are the South Shetland islands, the South Orkneys, the Sandwich group and Grahauls land.

The Window Shutter

The evolution of the shutter makes a colorful, romantic story. For two hundred or more years they had been put up because the architect believed them decorative or because the homeowner believed they would afford added protection against the gales of winter and protection for the carpets and furniture against the color-destroying glare of the summer sun. The original shutters had a more practical purpose. In England, where it is believed they originated, the householders built them for protection against the arrows of Robin Hood gangs or the rocks of other marauding bands. In New England they were equally effective in protecting the family against the depredation of the Redskins.

Ptomaine Poisoning Not From Canned Vegetables

For years there has been an idea among the general public that ptomaine poisoning can be contracted from eating canned goods. Ptomaine poisoning cannot come from canned fruits or vegetables—a botulinus poison may develop, says an authority, through the use of canned foods which have spoiled from under-processing or imperfect sealing but such spoilage is always detected by swelling of the can, discoloration or unpleasant odor and such food should be discarded. The same applies to fresh foods. Canned foods, like any other food product, are not always entirely blameless, but they present a minimum of danger. It is quite usual in cases of poison to lay the blame on canned food, but not once has it been proven to be the cause.

Those who work in canneries invariably eat what their own factory packs, which proves the merit of the goods.

Since canned fruits and vegetables are prepared from the best of raw materials in a scientific and sanitary manner its food value must necessarily be high. All the vitamins that were in the fresh products are retained after they are canned.
