We had an article in our last issue about the Castles on the Rhine.

There is in the heart of Washington a real one built on the model of one of these same castles.

Senator Henderson and his wife hailed from Missouri. His term in the senate was a very stormy one, for it was soon after the civil war, and strife and hatred was a usual thing in Congress. They had passed the Tenure of Office Bill which forbade the president to dismiss any one from office without the consent of Congress, Andrew Johnson the president was an independent man, and, in spite of this bill, dismissed some one from office. The Senate immediately proceded to impeach him for breaking the law. There were fifty four states in the Union at that time. A two thirds vote was required to impreach Johnson, 36 states for unpeachment. Just at that time Maryland was to elect a senator and she desired most earnestly to elect one who was against it on the Eastern shore for one of the Senators always came from there at that time so knowing Mr. George Vickers, of Chestertown, was against the impeachment, the legislature, which then elected the senators, voted for him. A steamer from Baltimore came for hm in the night and hurried him away to Washington, where he was in time to make the vote 35 for and 19 against thus keeping the president from being impeached.

It was Senator Henderson who cast the deciding vote, a fact that he was very proud of. After his term of office was over he and his wife went back to Missouri but they found themselves home sick for Washington, so they went back. The Senator bought a large lot on the outskirts of the city. Now this same lot is in the heart of the city and Sixteenth street runs through it. And then they built their castle on the hill overlookng the street.

Owning all that land made them immensely wealthy. When the senator died Mrs. Henderson gave a great deal of this valuable land to the city. Opposite her castle she gave the land for Meridan Park, and a very beautiful park it is. She was anxious to change the name from Sixteenth St. to President Ave., as the White House and many public buildings are there and many diplomatic embassies.

In fact it is the broadest handsomest street in all the city.

Having so much land and so much wealth made her a very influential person. She was a vegetarian, and never, though she entertained extensively did she serve meat at her delightful dinners. She was also an ardent prohibitionist and when prohibition became a law, the sewers ran with the priceless wines that the Senator, her husband had stored in the cellars.

She was most industrious, working in her garden, attending civic meetings and writing books and papers one of them beng: a manuel called 'The Aristocracy of Health.' One summer she spent up at the Sanitorium of Dr. Kellogg, the maker of breakfast food and afterwards she made a will leaving the Dr. a large share of her wealth.

She built a lovely home for her son, but he died before it was finished so she offered it to the United States as a residence for the Vice President but as the salary of that official was not sufficient to keep up such an elaborate establishment, the country refused the gift. Now it has become the Spanish Embassy. Her one son left a child which Mrs. Henderson afterwards found was an adopted one and though she applied for adoption papers she afterwards had the adoption set aside.

When Mrs. Henderson died in 1931 at Bar Harbor, Maine, many wills were found, so for a long time there has been a fight between the different legatees as to which will was the legal one.

Now the beautiful old home and all its contents are for sale. On Tuesday last there was a sale of the massive old furniture, the lovely pictures, and all the dainty belongings of the owners wardrobe. Numberless dresses handkerchiefs and jewels were sold under the auctoneer hammer. The curious throng who had only seen the castle at a distance, crowded in last Tuesday to the sale. The castle is to be held for private sale.

There are few in these times who will be able to keep up such an establishment.

CANCER STATISTICS
By DR. WILLIAM J. SCHOLES
PART 2.

Periodically some one bursts into print with the announcement that cancer is on the increase, a statement that is in no sense true. The increase is only apparent and not real, and for several reasons.

First, vital statistics are now more accurately recorded with the result that cancer cases are reported now that would not have been reported some years ago.

Second, advances in medical science during recent years make for more exact diagnostic methods, as a result of which cancer is today discovered where formerly it was overlooked.

Third, with the increase in the span of life during recent years more persons now attain the age in which cancer develops in the human organism.

The Lesson In The Above Figures

Every one is agreed that if the cause of cancer could be found a remedy would not be long in developing, which is the experience of the past with all diseases.

Discouraging and pessimistic as this may appear on its face, I contend that we'll still be looking for a cause of cancer ten thousand years hence, if that is to be the sole object of our search. Why do I say that? Because there is no cause of cancer, in the sense that we think of a cause of a disease process.

But there is a reason for cancer. And if we will stop looking for the cause of cancer and concentrate on finding the reason for it, we will get somewhere in the study of this problem.

Let me illustrate the difference between the two terms: The cause of a railroad accident may be the failure of the air brakes to work; the reason for the accident, carelessness in inspecting the brakes.

The cause of cancer? The cause of a blade of grass? The cause of a stone? The cause of one and another kind of living cell? The cause of these things never had a beginning—it always existed, else it would itself be an effect and not a cause. To fathom the cause of cancer we must plumb the depths of infinity and their unending reaches can ever be attained.

Hints for the Household

FOR FEBRUARY
By BETTY WEBSTER

A fancy dress party is a nice one to have on St. Valentine's Day. The invitations can be written with white ink on red hearts and each guest requested to dress as a Mother Goose character. The hostess ought to be 'Queen of Hearts.'

As the guests arrive each one is asked to write the name of the character he or she represents on a card which is dropped into a large heart-shaped box—a red one for the boys and a white one for the girls. After everyone has arrved, the white box is passed among the boys who draw out the cards and find their partners for the first game or dance—as the case may be.

Then—The Girls' Turn

After this is over, the red box may be passed to the girls who draw the cards and partners for the second part of the entertainment are selected.

The refreshments may be served at small tables covered with white cloths on which large red paper hearts are fastened. Tiny heart-shaped boxes of small candies, heart-shaped cakes, and pink and white ice cream hearts, make attractive refreshments.

DO YOU KNOW THAT:

1. A house should never be weatherstripped until it is a year old, because in that time the doors and windows become adjusted and the weather-stripping can then be put on permanently?

2. Plate glass instead of window glass in the doors and windows of a building cost very little more and add a finish and richness that can be acquired in no other way?

3. The cement floor of a basement will be very easy to keep clean if it is either oiled or waxed?

4. A lock that turns with difficulty will usually respond readily if a little oil is put on the key before it is inserted in the keyhole?

5. A thick layer of sand on top of a furnace will keep it cool and prevent any danger to the ceiling from the intense heat?

Track Candidates Called At College

Track, which will replace lacrosse on the spring sports program at Washington College this year, edged into the arena on Monday as Coach George Ekaitis, who will handle the runners, jumpers and the like, issued his first call for candidates. Only track aspirants were asked to report and after a discussion these lads were turned loose on the indoor track for the first workout of the season.

Coach Ekaitis, who is somewhat new to the track and field sports, indicated following the initial assembling of candidates that he would at least have a performer for each of the track events.

A schedule of dual meets is being arranged by Graduate Manager Fred W. Dumschott with several of these carded for the home field.

Little Johnny, aged seven, had been takn to the zoo. He stood before the leopard's cage for a few minutes staring intently. Then, turning to his mother, he asked:

'Mother, is that the dotted lion that everyone wants dad to sign on?'

NOW AND THEN

Next Thursday is Valentine's day, the day that is entened for sweethearts to send love missives to one another. Tradition says that an old gentlemen long ages ago, spent his time in writing letters for he lovers, who could not write themselves.

He became so popular that the people began to call him St. Valentine, and on the 14th of February hs birthday. we still celebrate the custom.

It is not supposed that the good old man would appreciate the various comics that are sent around on his natal day.

Whistler the Artist, was such a versatile man that we hear stories of him, of sayings and peculiar ways very often. He never hesitated to say what he thought and often he wounded his friends very much. One of the peers in England engaged him to paint a Peacock room for him. The wainscoting and all the ceiling was to be of peacocks.

Whistler pointed it for him but there was some disagreement about the price, so it was thrown back on the artist's hand.

Then Freer, one of our western Senators, who was an intense admirer of Whistler's painting went over to England and brought the whole room, panelling and all. He built in Washington, a museum, called the Freer Museum, where all the painting of Whistler's that he could gather are shown. The Peacock room is certainly a thing of beauty. The panels are of green while peacock and their feathers are painted all over them. Above the mantel is hung his famous picture, 'the Princess.'

His picture 'The Mother' which was brought over last year from France has been returned to that country.

If you can't be a pine at the top of the hill,
Be a scrub in the valley, but be
The best little scrub at the side of the rill—
Be a bush if you can't be a tree.
If you can't be a highway, then just be a trail;
If you can't be a sun, be a star.
It isn't by size that you rise or you fail;
Be the best of whatever you are!

ANON

February is surely a month of birthdays. Although it is the shortest month it has more birthdays than any month of the year.

Thursday was Dicken's birthday, the day that so many remember, for as long as his books are read, the red geraniums blooms and the ivy is green, his memory will be kept green by the English speaking people.

The Long Nip Up and the Short Nip Down

A kindly citizen, passing by an apartment house in the early hours of the morning, saw a man decanted limply against the doorway.

'What's the matter?' he asked. 'Drunk?'

'Yep.'

'Do you live in this house?'

'Yep.'

'Want me to help you upstairs?'

'Yep.'

With much difficulty he half dragged, half carried the drooping figure up the stairway to the second floor.

'What floor do you live on?' he asked 'this one?'

'Yep.'

Rather than face an irate wife who might, perhaps, take him for a companion more at fault than her husband, he opened the first door he came to and shoved the limp figure in.

He groped his way downstairs again. As he was going through the vestibule he made out the dim outlines of another man, apparently in a groggier condition than the frst one, who had just staggered in out of the night.

'What's the matter?' he asked. 'Are you drunk, too?'

'Yep,' was the feeble reply.

'Do you live in this house, too?'

'Yep.'

The Samaritan half carried the stranger to the second floor, where this man also said he lived. He opened the same door and pushed him in.

As he again reached the front door he discerned yet a third man evidently worse off than either of the other two. This person was disheveled and bleeding from small wounds on his head and face. He was about to approach him when the object of his solicitude darted out into the street and threw himself into the arms of a passing policeman.

'For heaven's sake, officer,' he gasped, 'protect me from this man. He's done nothin' all night long but drag me upstars and throw me down the' elevashaft.'

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE— WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute. 25c at drug stores. © 1931 C. M. Co.
