

YOUR DOG AND MINE

BY EDWARD C. LOUD, JR.

Head of the Rough Collie—Skull flat, moderately wide between the ears and gradually tapering to the eyes. There should be but a very slight prominence of the eyebrows and a very slight depression at the stop. The proper width of the skull necessarly depends on the combined length of skull and muzzle, for what would be a trick or too broad a skull in one dog is not necessarily so in another of the same actual girth, but better supported by length of muzzle. It must also be considered in conjunction with the size of the dog and should incline to lightness accompaned by cleaness of outline of cheeks and jaws. A heavy headed dog lacks the bright, alert and full of sense look so much to be desired. On the other hand, the attenuated head is most frequently seen with small terrier eyes, which show no character. Muzzle should be of fair length and tapering to the nose, which should be black; it must not show weakness or appear snippy. The teeth of good size and even.

Eyes of the Rough Collie—There being no brow in which to set the eyes, they are necessarily placed obliquely, the upper portion of the muzzle being dropped or chiseled to give them the necessary forward look out. They should be medium size, never showing too light in comparison with solor of coat nor with a yellow ring.

Ears of the Rough Collie—The ears can hardly be too small if carried properly; if too small, they are apt to be thrown quite erect or prick-eared; if too large, they cannot be properly lifted off the head, or if lifted, they show out of proportion. When in repose the ears are folded lengthwise and thrown back into the fril; on the alert they are thrown up and drawn close together on top of the skull. They should be carried about three-quarters erect. A prick eared dog should be penalized.

Neck of the Rough Collie—Should be muscular and of sufficient length to give the dog a fine standing appearance and show the frill.

Body of the Rough Collie—Rather long, ribs well rounded, chest deep, but of fair breadth behind the shoulders, which should have good slope. Loin slightly arched, showing power.

Legs of the Rough Collie—Forelegs straight and muscular, with a fair amount of bone, the forearms moderately fleshey; pastern showing flexibility without weakness, the hind legs less fleshy, very sinewy, and hocks and stifles well bent. Feet oval in shape, soles well padded and the toes arched close together.

Tail of the Rough Collie—Moderately long, carried low when he is quiet, the end having an upward twist or swirl; gaily when excited, but not carried over the back.

Coat of the Rough Collie—This is a very important point. The coat, except on the head and legs, should be abundant, the outer coat harsh to the touch, the inner soft and furry and very close, so close that it is difficult when parting the hiar to see the skin. The mane and frill should be very abundant. The mask or face smooth, the forelegs slightly feathered, the hindlegs below the hocks smooth. Hair on tail very profuse and on the hips long and bushy.

Color of the Rough Collie—Immaterial, though a righly or nicely marked dog has undoubtedly a considerable amount of weight with judges. The black and tan with white frill and collar, or with still more showy sable with perfect white markings will generally win.

Size of the Rough Collie—Dogs, about 24 inches at the shoulder; bitches, about 22 inches. Weight, dogs, about 60 pounds; bitches, about 50 pounds.

Expression of the Rough Collie—Combined product of the shape of the skull and muzzle, the set, size, shape and color of the eyes, and the position and the carriage of the ears.

Faults of the Rough Collie—Domed skull, high peaked occipital bone, heavy pendulous ears or the other extreme, prick ears; short tail or tail curled over the back.

Head of the Smooth Collie—Should be in proportion to the size of the dog; skull moderately wide between the ears, and flat, tapering to the end of the muzzle, which ought to be of a fair length but not too snipy, with only a short stop.

Teeth of the Smooth Collie—Strong and white. The top jaw fitting nicely over the lower.

Eyes of the Smooth Collie—Of almond shape, set obliquenly in the head, and the shade consistent with the color of the dog. A full and staring eye is very objectionable.

Ears of the Smooth Collie—Small, and when the dog's attention is attracted, carried semi-erect; but when in repose it is natural for them to be laid back.

Neck of the Smooth Collie—Long and well arched, and shoulders muscular and sloping.

Back of the Smooth Collie—Long and well arched, chest fairly deep but not too wide.

Forelegs of the Smooth Collie—Straight and muscular, with a fair amount of bone. The hindlegs should be rather wide apart, with stifle well bent.

Feet of the Smooth Collie—Compact, knuckles well sprung, claws strong and close together, pads cannot be too hard.

Coat of the Smooth Collie—Short, dense flat coat, with good texture, with an abundance of undercoat.

Symmetry of the Smooth Collie—The dog should be of fair length on the leg, his movements active and graceful.

Height of the Smooth Collie—Dogs, 22 to 24 inches; bitches, 20 to 22 inches.

Tail of the Smooth Collie—Of medium length, and when the dog is standing quietly, should be slightly raised, but more so when excited.

1. That on the 19th day of June, 1919, Louise Bate Dutcher was married to the defendant, Arnold Schley Dutcher, by her father, the Reverend E. W. Bate, at Wappingers Fall, in the State of New York, and that she and the said defendant lived together as man and wife in the said State of New York until July 29, 1930.

2. That there is no child nor children living as a result of said marriage between your Oratrix and her said husband, the defendant hereinbefore named.

3. That ever since her said marriage, your Oratrix has behaved herself as a faithful, affectionate and chaste wife towards the said Arnold Schley Dutcher.

4. That altho the conduct of your Oratrix towards her husband, the said Arnold Schley Dutcher, has always been kind, affectionate and above reproach, the said Arnold Schley Dutcher has, without any just cause or reason, treated her with great harshness and cruelty, being very abusive, drinking, absent from home over weekends when your Oratrix did not know where he was or had been, and, finally, his manner and conduct became so unbearable that she was forced to leave their home; that since 1926, she has been compelled to work and support herself and that from January, 1930, the defendant has contributed nothing towards her support.

5. Your Oratrix, therefore, charges that the desertion of her by the said defendant has been for more than three years, is deliberate and final and beyond any reasonable expectation of a reconciliation.

6. That your Oratrix now is and has been since September, 1930, a resident of Kent County, State of Maryland.

7. That the said defendant, Arnold Schley Dutcher, is a resident of Wappingers Falls, in the State of New York.
