MOVIES NEXT WEEK

Two features of special interest to music lovers in Samuel Goldwyn's 'We Live Again,' adapted from Leo Tolstoy's 'Resurection,' are the Russian A Capella Choir which supplies a musical background for the beautiful and impressive Russian Easter Midnight Service; and the colorful gypsy chorus led by Nina Kochetz, famous opera star, and Khmara, the world's foremost interpreter an dexponent of gypsy songs and music.

Anna Stein and Fredric March are the only professional actors who participate in the Easter Service, which is chanted entirely without instrumental accompaniment by voices to whom the ritual is an inborn tradition. Led by a picked group of sixteen men and twelve women, the celebrants, all gathered from the Russian colonies which dot the Pacific Coast, joined in creating a high point of religious song with their rendition of the Easter anthem, 'Christos Voscrasia,' or 'Christ Is Risen.'

The gypsy choral ensemble referred to provides the entertainment at an officers' dinner, presided over by March in the role of the reckless young Prince Dmitri.

Alfred Newnam, musical director for Samuel Goldwyn, was largely responsible for the beauty and effectiveness of both scenes as finally incorporated into the picture, which comes to the New Lyceum on Monday and Tuesday, May 6 and 7.

'We Live Again' was directed by Rouben Mamoulian from a script by Preston Sturges, Leonard Praskins and Maxwell Anderson, for release through United Artists.

Preceded by glowing reports of its laugh-punctured situations, 'It's A Small World' comes to the New Lyceum on Wednesday and Thursday, May 8 and 9.

This is Fox Film's screen adaptation of 'Highway Robbery,' Albert Treynor's American Magazine story.

Spencer Tracy is featured. His leading woman is the beauteous British player, Wendy Barrie, who delighted with her impersonation of Jane Seymour, second of the five wives in 'Henry VIII.' Now she makes her American bow in a Hollywood-made picture. Stardom is predicted for her.

Tracy is given, at his request, a straight feature-length comedy role, the first of its kind in his screen career. Where in the past the touched the periphery of comedy, here he works out romance out of a riotous comedy of errors.

'It's A Small World,' deals with two fast motor cars, doing eighty somewhere in Louisiana and meeting (also stopping) in a head-on collision. No casualties, happily. A slick cat lawyer steps out of his wreckage and begins to heap invective. A smart girl steps out of her wreckage, and refuses to listen. They go to jail for reckless driving. When a lawyer takes advantage of a old Napoleonic law giving him the right to the debtor's body, fun starts.

In the supporting cast are Raymond Walburn, Virginia Sale, Astrid Allwyn, Irving Bacon, Charles Sellon, Nick Foran, Belle Daube, Frank McGlynn, Sr., Frank McGlynn, Jr., Bill Gillis, Ed Brady and Harold Minjir.

'It's A Small World,' was produced by Edward Butcher and directed by Irving Cummings.

Darryl F. Zanuck took a page from P. T. Barnum's book when he surrounded with mystery the pair of midgets and the giant he brought to Hollywood for his 20th Century Pictures production of 'The Mighty Barnum,' which comes to the New Lyceum on Friday, and Saturday, May 10 and 11.

Even the stars of Hollywood did not see them before the film was completed, because Zanuck said thumbs down on Hollywood parties and insisted that they travel about Hollywood in closed cars during the production of this Joseph M. Schenck presentation in which Wallace Beery portrays the great showman of a century ago. Their contracts also stipulated that they must not appear at night clubs, or other gathering places of Hollywood celebrities.

After scouring the country, Zanuck found a General Tom Thumb and bride and a Cardiff Giant in the respective persons of George and Olive Brasno, midget brothe rand sister, and Tex Madsen, eight feet four, who for the past two years had been appearing at the Chicago World's Fair.

This air of mystery even extended to Virginia Bruce, for the screen test by which she won the role of lovely Jenny Lind, the Swedish Nightingdale whom Barnum brought to American, was made in secret and kept under lock and key. Not even Zanuck's associates at 20th Century have seen it.

Others in the cast of the story from the pens of Gene Fowler and Bess Meredyth are Adolphe Menjou, Virginia Bruce, Rochelle Hudson, Janet Beecher, Lucille La Verne and Tammany Young. Walter Lang directed 'The Mighty Barnum' for release through United Artists.

Sonny: 'Mother, we're going to play elephants at the zoo and we want you to help us.'

Mother: 'What on earth can I do?'

Sonny: 'You can be the lady who gives them peanuts and candy.'

YOUR DOG AND MINE

By EDWARD C. LOUD, JR.

COMMON DRUGS—THEIR USES AND ACTION

1. Boric Acid—As a solution may be used for eyes; in cases of catarrh of nose, cold in head, washing wounds, swabbing boils, styes or swollen parts. In powdered form, eight parts to one part of powdered iodoform, can be used dusting gathered lacerated wounds.

2. Bi-carbonate of Soda and Bismuth—Mix one part bi-carbonate of soda and two parts of bismuth and give for indigestion or colic. Dose should be one-half to four teaspoonfuls, according to size of dog, two or three times a day.

3. Vaseline—Common comercial vaseline and ordinary fine vaseline is yellow; white vaseline is a variety. Is used as a base for ointments, because it does not become rancid. It is not as desirable as lard or lanoline in the treatment of mange. Used as a lubricant for rectal themometers and instruments. Leather leads and collars are preserved when rubbed with it. Will prevent tarnish and rust on metal instruments.

4. Quinine—To reduce fever give doses of five grains.

5. Aromatic Spirits of Ammonia—Poured on the palm of the hand and rubbed briskly, the vapor evapored by the heat acts as a heart and respiratory stimulant. Hold hand close to nostrils of dog with heart weakness or that has fainted.

6. Sulphur is used both internally and externally for eczema. Putting it in drinking water is of no value but given in food is beneficial.

7. Syrup of White Pine is good for relief in larungitis, coughs and bronchitis.

8. Glycerine and Carbolic—Used as internal antiseptic. Is a preventative against distemper and splendid for septic pneumonia. It keeps a dog in a sanitary condition and disinfects whole internal organsm. Mix one part carbolic to ten of glycerine. Dose for small dogs, ten drops in water twice daily.

9. Cod Liver Oil—The better cod liver oil is pale yellow or almost colorless. It has a fishy odor and an oily, fishy taste. It has been proven that cod liver oil is the best of tonics for growing puppies, it is to be given to feeble animals and to the young suffering from malnutrition. Of especial value in treatment of rickets because is is bottled sunlight and should be given in small doses two or three times a day. Too much oil has a tendency to become laxative. The doze for puppies is one quarter to one teaspoonful, depending upon size of puppy, gradually increasing from one to six teaspoonful, depending upon size of puppy, gradually increasing from one to six teaspoonfuls. Continue until seven or eight months of age. The oil has no specific action on any organ of the body. Besides improving nutrition it is an excellent bone builder and is one of the best coat and skin tonics. It is of especial benefit in building up the system, giving high resistance against distemper, and is valuable in convalescence against distemper. The dose for adult dogs depends on age, breed and weight of patient and varies from half a teaspoonful to one tablespoonful two or three times a day. Very old dogs suffering from chronic bronchial cough are relieved by small doses given at frequent intervals. It is unwise to buy a poor grade of cod liver oil, as much valuable time and effort is lost in so doing.

10. Glycerine, Syrup and water—Two parts of glycerine and two parts common table syrup one part water excellent for coughs or sore throat. Given in one tablespoonsful doses every four hosrs.

11. Subnitrate of Bismuth—For vomiing. If bowels are constipated, give enema of soap solution. Then give five grains dose of Bismuth with Milk of Magnesia every two hours. If retained continue for five or six doses, then give Bismuth alone.

12. Glycerine for ear canker—One part glycerine and two parts grain aldhol. Swab ear twice a day.
