AT MOVIES NEXT WEEK

The Spain of song, high romance and heartbreak is the setting of Marlene Dietrich's new Paramount picture, 'The Devil Is a Woman,' which comes on Monday and Tuesday, June 3 and 4 to the New Lyceum Theatre.

Directed by Joseph von Sternberg, 'The Devil Is a Woman' portrays Miss Dietrich as a heartless siren whose kiss brings ruin to the men who love her.

The dramatic conflict of the picture arises from the fact that both Lionel Atwill and Cesar Romero are her lovers. Atwill is a Spanish Army Captain who has lavished his fortune and ruined his career for her love. Romero is his young friend, a high-spirted and impetuous adventurer.

The Spanish charmer plays one man against the other until, after a wild and colorful native carnival, they meet on the field of honor. Here, in a dramatic and gripping climax, events occur that change the lives of all three.

Josef von Sternberg, Miss Dietrich's director for seven years, directed 'The Devil Is a Woman,' in addition to supervising the photography and the designing of its startling and beautiful settings.

Robin and Rainger, composers of 'Love in Bloom' and other recent favorites, composed a new tune which is sung by Miss Dietrich in 'The Devil Is a Woman.' Prominent n the supporting cast of the picture are Edward Everett Horton and Alison Skipworth.

That particular style of domestic comedy made popular by Charlie Ruggles and Mary Boland in such hits as 'Ruggles of Red Gap,' 'Six of a Kind,' 'The Pursuit of Happiness' and half a dozen other flms s developed in an even more delightful vein in 'People Will Talk,' their latest screen effort, which comes to the New Lyceum on Wednesday and Thursday, June 5 and 6.

Once more Ruggles is cast as the meek husband who 'takes it' from a domineering, overbearing wife—Miss Boland. This time, however, the characterizations are more finely shaded. Ruggles is not quite so domineering, and they have reached the far side of their silver wedding anniversary in unusually high good spirits.

But trouble suddenly looms—in the shape of a quarrel between their daughter, played by Lelia Hyams, and her husband, Dean Jagger. Ruggles and Miss Boland feel that they have to do something to bring the children together and their solution is to stage a free-for-all fight between themselves, hoping to make the youngsters realize just how silly it all it.

The fight comes off in grand style—too grand. For Miss Boland forgets it's all in fun, and is bitterly offended by the way Ruggles treats her. Add to that the gossip of snooping neighbors who misinterpret Ruggles' innocent friendship with another woman and you have a very bad situation indeed.

How it's solved when Ruggles is called upon to referee a charity wrestling match and is caught between the two professional bruisers provides one of the most hysterical climaxes that has come to the screen in months.

Alfred Santell directed the picture for Paramount.

Starring Ann Sothern and with Ralph Bellamy and John Buckler in the featured roles, 'Eight Bells,' Columbia's gripping romantic drama, comes to the New Lyceum on Friday and Saturday, June 7 and 8 or part of a double feautre show.

Vivid and colorful, the film is a genuinely believable story of a threecornered romance that takes place aboard a freighter bound for Shanghai. The captain, played by John Buckler, and his first officer, Ralph Bellamy, are goth in love with lovely Ann Sothern, who portrays the daughter of the owner of the steamship line and a stowaway aboard the freighter.

When the vessel runs into a typhoon, the captain shows his incompetence and cowardice, which result in a mutiny among the crew of sixty men. With the captain frightened and of no use, the first officer takes command.

Only by force of will and undaunted courage, does the first officer manage to bring his ship safely to port. The story does not stop there, however, but continues on to a satisfying and powerful ending.

Fine acting is featured in every phase of the film, and the splendid photography and Roy William Neill's experienced direction leave little to be desired in 'Eight Bells.' It is heartily recommended as first-class entertainment for every member of the family.

Franklin Pangborn, Catharine Doucet, Spencer Charters, David Clyde, John Darrow, Emerson Treacy, Arthur Hohl, Addison Richards, Joseph Sauers, Joseph Singer and Charley Grapewin are included in the supporting cast.

YOUR DOG AND MINE

FEEDING, CARE AND GENERAL MANAGEMENT

By EDWARD C. LOUD, JR.

The dog is naturally active, and will take a great deal of exercise if allowed, so long as he not overfed and thereby rendered inactive and lazy. Chained dogs should have at least one hour's exercise twice a day. Lap dogs do not get enough exercise indoors, and motoring is not a substitute for a run: the latter compels the use of their limbs and free play of their air pipes and lungs.

The proper feeding of dogs is a matter deserving of the utmost attention. The house or yard dog is often too comdemmed to eat whatever scraps the establishment provides, the result being that one day he may be feasted upon an abundance of rich and wholly improper food, whilst on the next one he is given a few crusts of bread, and not enough to satisfy his requirements.

Inferior foods and indiscreet feeding are accountable for the majority of canine disorders. Two points particularly should be borne in mind that overfeeding is at any time a mistake, but especially so where circumstances do not permit of the necessary amount of exercise being given, and that dogs, like human beings, require variety in their dietary if they are to thrive and be healthy. The question of proper diet remained a problem for a long time, since the dog, although a member of a carnivorous family, is partly vegetarian. To live entirely on fresh meat would be to the dog in his present state of domestication as injurious as to subsist entirely on farinaceous foods. The problem has, however, long been solved, and today there is a food adapted perfectly to the requirements of every breed at every age.

The value of the pure-bred dog was never as great as it is today. With dog shows increasing in popularity all over the world, the great public have been educated up to a high standard, and the mongrel or cross-bred is of little value; no matter if the dog is only required for a companion, guard, or for sporting purposes, the great public now insist on a pure bred one. It will therefore be understood that the hobby of rearing and breeding dogs is increasing by leaps and bounds, and that it is a profitable hobby can be easily seen, for many of the most successful breeders are found amongst the working classes, who make an excellent income out of their dogs.

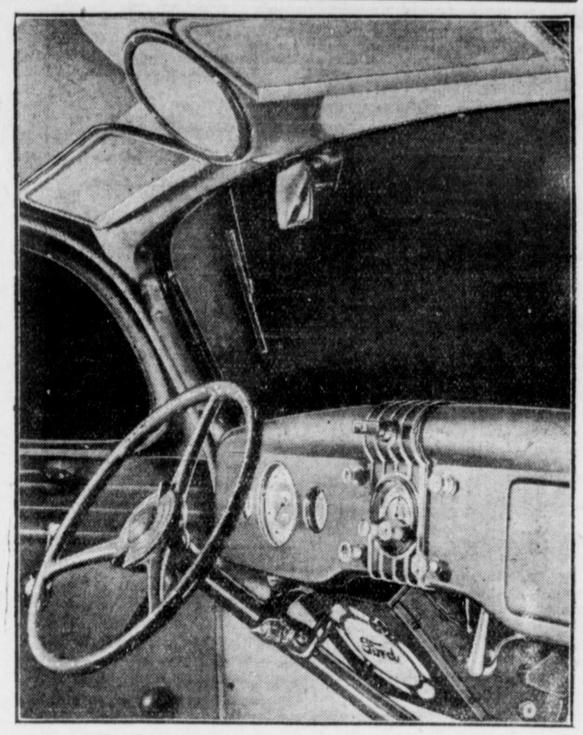

A novice who is desirous of starting as a breeder of dogs should carefully consider his plans, and if he can afford to pursue his way without thought of pecuniary gain, then his path is an easy one, but if he wants to make his hobby a paying one, he must go slowly, as fashions in dogs are as changeable as ladie's attire. The variety of dog that is fashionable this year may decline in popularity next. The novice should first attend as many dog shows as he can, for he then will be able to ascertain the variety of dog that most careful inquiries as to whether the breed he has selected is popular; he can then go a step further and find out which are the most successful strains this requires a careful study of the pedigrees of the big winners.

Assuming that the novice has made up his mind on the variety of dog and also on the strain, he should watch the sale columns of the leading dog papers, andw hen he sees a bitch advertised for sale, of the strain he desires to possess, he should take steps to become its owner if it is strong and healthy; and if reasonable in price we will assume the novice has become the owner of a brood bitch that answers the following description a fashionable variety, a descendant of a successful strain, and strong and healthy.

The prospective breeder would then look out for a sire. He should remember that the dog who is experiencing the greatest success in the show ring is not always the most successful sire, and that some strains do not nick together well. If the novice is no sure of his own judgement in selecting a stud dog, he should try and obtain the help and advice of a breeder who will be able to tell him the points where his bitch fails.

Ford Radio Embodies New Design

New principles of design are embodied in this custom-built Ford radio receiver. The loudspeaker is located above the rear vision mirror.

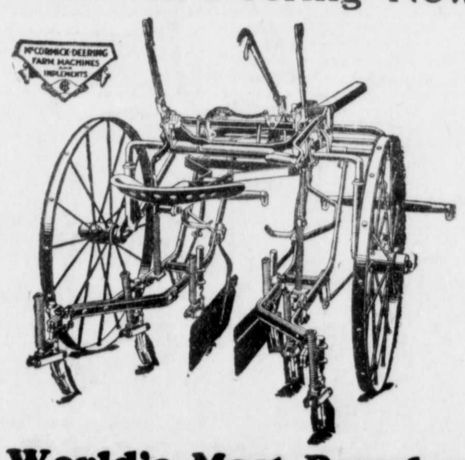

A RADIO loudspeaker located above the heads of passengers, so that the sound comes straight and undistorted both to front and rear seats, is one of the newest and most modern developments in the field of automotive radio equipment. The new overhead speaker is one of the dominant features of the custom built receiving set specially constructed for the new 1935 Ford V-8 car.

The loudspeaker of the new Ford radio is located just above the rear vision mirror in the car header. Sound from the loudspeaker is distributed directly to all portions of the car, without distortion by indirect speakers such as have been used in the past. Greater fidelity of tone, as well as greater richness and quality, result from the new design.

The new Ford receiving set is located directly above the steering column, out of sight and out of the way. The custom-built set embodies automatic volume control, two unit construction with separate speaker, bass compensation, and a tone control button on the chassis with four-point control—bright, brilliant, mellow and deep tones.

A specially illuminated dial for the new set is mounted in the ash receptacle opening in the instrument panel, with the control knobs finished to match other controls on the panel.

McCormick-Deering New 4

World'a Most Popular Riding Cultivator

A SLIGHT pressure on one of the pedals of the New 4 pivots the wheels and shifts the gangs at the same time—giving double-quick action in dodging plants or hills out of line.

The New 4 is a "balance frame" cultivator. When the gangs are raised by the master lever which is provided, the frame moves forward, balancing the cultivator and the driver nicely.

The thorough success of the McCormick-Deeaing New 4 has undoubtedly made the largest selling riding cultivator in the world. We will be glad to show it to you. We also have McCormick-Deering Cultivators in 2-row sizes and in types for use with the Farmall tractor.
