Hints for the Household

By BETTY WEBSTER

I received a letter not long ago from way up in Canada asmking for directions for making vinegar with brown sugar. It really interested me and I decided to find out more about the home manufacture and tell all my readers about it.

It seems tha vinegar can be made in several different ways and the brown sugar process is one of them. However, vinegaris soured alcohol and is made through a process of fermentation. And, I was surprised and glad to learn, vinegar made with sugar is dangerous to use—except externally—unless the fermentation is watched with laboratory care.

Of course, most of us can't give this attention to the product and ought not to try it. The only exception to this is he apple vinegar whch can be made a home because the fermentation is natural and does not have to be watched so closely as when it is produced artificially by the combination of sweet and sour.

Sliced Cucumber Pickles

Peel and slice three dozen cucumbers and one dozen onions. Salt separately and let stand over night. In the morning, drain, mix, pack in jars.

Put n kettle two cups of sugar, five cups of vinegar, three teaspoons of ground white pepper and one tablespoon of celery seed. Let mixture come to a boil. Remove from fire and let stand until perfectly cold. Then add four tablespoons of horseradish.

Pour over cucumbers and onions and seal in crock or jars.

PRESERVING RECIPES

Pickled Peaches

8 pounds of peaches
1 pint of vinegar.
4 pounds of sugar

Stick two or three cloves in each peach; add a few sticks of cinnamon to syrup; cook five or ten minutes until tender. Cool peaches and syrup separately put in jars and pour syrup over them. Let stand twenty-four hours; seal jars.

Chicken-Noodle Croquettes

1 cup finely chopped cooked chicken or veal.
1 cup canned corn (or fresh, cooked).
1-2 package narrow egg noodles.
2-3 cup very thick white sauce.
1-4 cup finely chopped celery.
2 tablespoons minced onion.
2 tablespoons butter, melted.
1 1-2 teaspoons salt.
Pepper to taste.
Fine dry bread crumbs.
2 eggs, well beaten.
1-4 cup milk.

Cook the noodles until tender in boiling salted water. Drain and combine with them the rest of the ingredients. Chill and then shape nto cones, balls, or rolls. Dip in bread crumbs, in beaten eggs, and again in the crumbs, Or slightly crushed, flaky prepared cereal does an interesing job of taking the place of crumbs. Then fry in a frying basket in deep fat (390 degrees F.) until golden brown. Drain and serve.

The Road To Better Health

IMMUNITY AND RESISTANCE

By DR. WILLIAM J. SCHOLES

Some tell us vital resistance doesn't mean anything. Others go so far as to say it doesn't even exist. In my opinon, both groups are all wrong.

As is well known we are surrounded at all times by harmful factors capable of destroying life, and it stands to reason that nature would not let us go unprotected against these dangers. As a matter of fact, did we not have some weapon for fighting these enemies, the human race would have become extinct centuries ago.

So our common sense tells us that every living organism must possess the capacity for resisting the dangerous influence that encompass it, if it is to survive. This capacity I call vital resistance. Some call it immunity.

Difference Between Immunity and Resistance

The measure of resistance we possess protects us against ALL dangers (excepting, of course, accdents). Immunity, however, safeguards us against a certain disease, only. Thus we may possess immunity to smallpox, but not to typhoid, whereas we have a certain amount of resistance to both.

Lowered Resistance

Vital resistance may be reduced in a variety of ways. Loss of sleep, malnutrition, fatigue, alcoholism are examples of factors through whcih resistance to disease may be broken down.

If our capacity to withstand disease is founded solely on immunity to different diseases, why is it that we do not contract those diseases when exposed to them in our unimmunized state? I have at no time in my life been immune to pneumonia, but I haven't had pneumonia, although I have been repeatedly exposed to it and have had pneumonia germs in my throat.

How did I escape having pneumonia? Were the germs weak sisters? Or, was I too strong for the germs? If my blood destroyed them as fast as they multiplied in the past, why may it some day fail to do this and I succumb to the disease? What should make my blood fail to do at one time what it successfully does at another time?

All of which convinces me that so long as we keep our vital forces at par we will be safe against disease—immunity or no immunity.
