VIRGINIA A. BATTLEFIELD

As the tourist goes through Virginia he is impressed what a battle field it has always been.

When he travels from old historic Williamsburg to Yorktown there are countless reminders of those who have given their lives in their countrys service. To quote Bryant's words, 'All that tread the globe are but a handful to the tribes that slumber in its bossom.'

There are many markers to show where some brave Frenchman fell in the Revolutionary war, for on the road he can see in fancy the noble Lafayette's regiment coming up to meet Washington's army and forming a line which cut off Cornwallis's retreat by land while Count de Grasse, with his fleet, cut it off by water. Certainly our country owes much to France in the winning of the Revolutionary war. The monument at Yorktown, to the heroes of this war, is very impressive though one could wish that each hero had a separate statue instead of being carved in bas relief on the monument. The broad sweep of Hampton Roads makes Yorktown a very desirable place as a naval station and among the officers stationed there is one of Chestertown former boys, Lieutenant Harry Derringer.

Across the water is Fortress Monroe, a strong Army Base, but the handsome Hotel Chamberlaine shows that it is also a great summer resort.

There are many momentoes of the war of 1812 for Virginia was also one of the sufferers in that war, but the conflict that laid her low, and from the effects she has never recovered was the great civil war, the war of the states where often brother was arrayed against brother and sometimes father against son. It make one sad now to think of the flower of young manhood sacrificed, and all the beautiful homes burned and countless property destroyed. In many towns of the south there are federal cemeteries beautifully kept, showing that many, many soldiers of the Union lost their lives, too, in that great struggle.

In Petersburg there is old Blanford Church, a church sacred to the memory of the dead. There are stained glass windows given by each southern state erected as a memorial to its heroes while a tablet tells of thirty thousand confederates who were killed in one battle near the town of Petersburg. At a distance is seen a monument, erected by the children of Pennsylvania to the brave dead who died in this battle, fighing for the union. The grave yard in the old church has many grave stones of heroes who died long ago. Among them one to 'Marse Dick' which was very appealing for it states that he was greatly beloved by his friends of men and boys' and also by his slaves. It was memorial day as we toured through this interesting state, flags were every where, but while many flags of the Union were seen there was a larger number of the stars and bars, emblem of a lost cause; only thirteen stars, to the Unions forty eight. As we drove down the fine state roads and saw great fields of waving wheat I thought of those same fields which were red with blood sixty years ago. War is surely a dreadful thing, death and destruction follows in its wake and it makes ones heart sick to see all the accoutrements of war in so many places. War is desolating, while peace brings happiness and prosperity. If countries could only remember this and put the money spent on making ready, should war come, to upbuilding their country and teaching all useful and instructive work this country would indeed be one to be proud of.

WOMEN

Mrs. Roberta Keene Tubman, of New York, is known as 'The Star Spangler' because with her powerful voice, she is every ready to sing her countrys anthem. She is the leader of 'America's Goodwill Union' and she always says, 'I never let anything get ahead of me.'

Wall St., is a great gathering for Communists who mount soap boxes and harangue about the sins of the rich and the injustice shown to the poor.

This year, as the Goodwill Union was to have its celebration, members phoned to Mrs. Tubman that the Communists were there before them, and it would be usless to try to hold their meeting.

But did Mrs. Tubman give up? Not one miute. She mounted the Stone platform in front of Washington's statue, and began, in her powerful voice to sing the Star Spangled Banner while the band blared mightely and the crowd of 1,000 looked on as they munched their luncheon.

Another time, while sitting in the subway a crowd of Communist began to sing the 'International.'

She opened her mouth and began the Star Spangled Banner. The angry communists sang louder but she pitched her voice higher and higher. It was only when she had to get off to attend a meeting did the communists have a chance to sing.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

By Ethel M. Hunter
Home Economist Eastern Shore Public Service

Now that Eastern Shore gardens are producing delicious green pears, here's a way you can use them in an appetizing manner:

Pea Timbales With White Sauce

2 1-3 cups cooked peas.
2 teaspoonful melted butter.
1-8 teaspoonful pepper (black).
1 cup white sauce.
2 eggs well beaten.
2-3 teaspoonful salt.
1-2 teaspoonful grated onion.
Dash of Cayenne.

Cook peas until tender. Reserve 1-3 cup. Rub remainder through sieve. To this pulp, add eggs, butter, salt, pepper, cayenne, and onian. Turn into well buttered moulds. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F) about 25 or 30 minutes until firm and light brown. Add the 1-3 cup reserved peas to white sauce and serve with timbales.

For making the White sauce, take 1 cup milk, 2 teaspoonful butter, 1 teaspoon flour, 1-4 teaspoonful salt, and a dash of pepper. Melt butter, add flour, and mix until smooth. Add salt, pepper, and milk. Cook 3 to 5 minutes.

THE SEVENTH MAN

Not so long ago the Prince of Wales visited a small private hospital for veterans so seriously injured and disfigured in the War that they could never hope for release.

At each cot he stopped, shook hands with the Tommy and spoke words of encouragement. After more than an hour he was led toward the exit.

Suddenly he turned to the head nurse. 'I understood you had 36 patients here—but I've seen only 29.'

It was explained that the others were so hideously disfigured that he was not taken into their ward.

'Is it for my sake or theirs that you're not taking me there?' he asked quietly.

'For yours, sir.'

'Then I insist you show me in.'

He was led into the room. At each bed he stopped long enough to thank the wounded veteran for the sacrifice he had made and to assure him that neither he nor England would ever forget it.

When he had finished he turned to his guide.

But I have seen only six men. Where is the seventh?

The head nurse said that no one was permitted to see him. He was so terribly disfigured, that he was kept alone in a room, where he would never leave alive.

Please do not see him Sir, she pleaded.

'I must see him!' I insist that you take me in.

She turned and led him into the room. The prince walked up to the bed. His face was white and his lips drawn.

He looked down upon the man who was so disfigured. Then he bent down and kissed the broken hero, with tears in his eyes.

"MY RANGE IS SO VERY CLEAN------ IT SAVES ME MONEY."
Says one Housewife, Mrs. A. B. Crute, of Salisbury, Md.

How Much is Cleanliness Worth to You?

TO ONE WOMAN it was worth 'a whole new set of pans." Mrs. Crute, Salisbury, Md., writes:

"My range is so very clean, I think that the saving in steel wool that I used to buy for cleaning the bottoms of my utensils would amount to enough to buy a whole new set of pans .... I find my electric range more economical than anything I have ever used."
