HEALTH REPORT FOR MAY

414 CHILDREN EXAMINED BY DENTIST

The first week in June marks the end of another successful year for the Kent County school dental clinic program. A brief review of accomplishments under the program for a four month period ending June 7th compiled from the reports of Dr. Russell P. Kiker, school dentist, follows:

Four hundred and fourteen school children were examined for dental defects and of these 357 were found needing dental attention. One hundred twenty eight children were given corrective treatment, it taking 581 sittings to complete their work. One hundred and thirteen of the 128 children had all work possible in the clinic completely finished.

The corrective work included 1131 filings, 204 extractions, 110 cleanings and 82 various other operations for total number of operations aggregating 1537. These figures disclose the following fact.

The average number of defects per child treated was nearly 12. This means that on an average each of these 128 children had 12 dental defects that could, probably would, be the source of either local or systemic trouble. In other words, 128 crippled mouths were restored to a normal healthy condition.

The cost of this program adds to the interest the above figures should arouse. The total cost, defrayed largely by the State, the County Board of Education and the County Board of Commissioners (and in a small part by the children's parents) was $648.94. Without counting any expense for examination, the examination is a most important part of the program, the cost per child treated was $5.00, and the cost per operation performed was 42c. This latter figure is so low that it is necessary to emphasize the fact that this is only possible through the cooperation of the Board of Education and a liberal grant of money from them. The Board and the entire public school staff deserve unlimited praise for their help.

Another group cooperating has been the county dentists. They have all supported the program motivated by the hope that it would improve the mouth health of Kent County children. Kent County is fortunate in having competent dental practitioners who are so civic minded as to lend their aid in bettering conditions which no one knows better than they may constitute a serious menace to the health of the citizens of the county.

Communicable Diseases

One case of diphtheria was reported in a family at Rock Hall. This was quite a severe case and necessitated the child being sent to Easton Hospital for proper care.

One case of scarlet fever was reported in the vicinity of Millington. One death from tetanus was reported in an infant. There was one case of tuberculosis, 1 mumps, 1 pneumonia and three cases of social diseases reported to this office.

Clinical Service

Two Infant and Pre-School Clinics were held by Dr. J. H. M. Knox, Jr., Chief of the Bureau of Child Hygiene, State Department of Health. A total of 58 children were examined at these conferences.

At the weekly Social Disease Clinic conducted by Dr. H. G. Simpers and assisted by the nurse. 132 treatments were given and 18 blood tests taken. A number of delinquent patients were visited and requested to report for further treatment.

During the month of May the physical examinations at all of the white and colored schools were completed with the excepton of Chestertown. A special list of children having major defects was completed and an effort will be made by the Health Department staff to have these defects corrected during the summer months. There are approximately 250 children with badly infected tonsils and adenoids in need of operation.

STATISTICAL—Births 12, White 3, Colored 9. Deaths 15, White 10, Colored 5.

CAUSES OF DEATHS—Heart Trouble 8, Still Birth 1, Cancer 1, Diabetes 1, Drowning 1, Tuberculosis 1, Cerebral Hemorrhage 1, Anemia 1.

YOUR DOG AND MINE

FEEDING, CARE AND GENERAL MANAGEMENT

By EDWARD C. LOUD, JR.

For the first few days of their existence the puppies provided that they are a healthy litter and their mother has a sufficient supply of milk, will require no attention save hers. They are very much better left alone under such circumstances, as few things are more calculated to upset the equanimity of the bitch than unnecessary intrusion upon her privacy. Of course, they are sickly or ill, nourished puppies it is necessary that they should be watched so that the dead ones may be removed.

Should the dam's supply of milk prove to be inadequate, it will be necessary either to place her puppies under the care of a foster mother or do the best possible, under the circumstances, with artificial food. The former is always risky, as it is not every bitch that will take kindly to the whelps of another, and unless she has been upon the premises for some time, so as to be accustomed to the surroundings, it is unlikely that she will do them justice. Then, to, if she has not whelped at very nearly the same time as the other, there is likely to be trouble with her milk. Consequently it is safest and best to bring the puppies up by hand if their mother has not enough milk to provide them with nourishment.

When the bitch is strong, healthy, and the supply of milk is abundant, let the process of weaning be left to nature. In nine cases out of ten the dam will attend to it better than you can. After the pups are three weeks old, get them accustomed to lap some puppy meal, and as they get older they will, in addition, take to some puppy biscuits.

When the puppies arrive at the age of one month, they will be ready to eat alone.

At the age of six weeks the pups are old enough to wean; this should be a gradual process, as, if the young ones are suddenly removed, both they and their dam will suffer. The best plan is to withdraw the bitch for a hour or two in the daytime, and gradually to extend the period of separation until she is only with her puppies at night. Later she may be taken away altogether. For the first few days after they are weaned, the puppies do very badly, and, in fact, often present quite an emaciated appearance, though this does not necessarily prove that there is anything serious the matter with them. It is rather that the entire absence of the mother's milk as an article of daily food has had the effect of reducing fat. It very frequently happens, too, that puppies suffer a great deal from worms, which not only needlessly worry them, but are apt to cause fits. Consequently, even if the whelps do not appear to be suffering from these parasites, it is a wise precaution to let them fast for a few hours and them administer doses of medicine for ascarids or large round worms in puppies. After this they usually start growing again.
