Queen Wilhemina of the Netherland is much loved by her subjects. Since her succession 45 years ago, when she was eighteen years old she has held the reign of government in her strong hands and because she, like her Dutch subjects, is ecomonical, she has amassed vast sums of money. Holland is the wealthiest of countries because she owns the rich islands of Java Borneo Sumatra Celebes and numerous other little islands all teeming with rich products.

These have been called the emerald in the Queen's crown, for Holland itself is a very tiny kingdom.

But right at present the Government finds much to worry it. The Japanese are selling these islands their goods at a much less rate than the Netherlands and consequently have gotten a large part of their trade.

They are also inducing these young Indonesian to attend he Japanese Colleges which are so much nearer than those of other countries. There they are told that Wilhemina is a wicked old rich woman, and that their taxes if under Japanese rule would be much less.

The statesmen of Holland have urged the Queen either to go herself or send her only child, Juliana, to visit these distant lands, but she says 'No.' She thinks it wiser to keep her at home. Every day they both go riding on their bicycles side by side.

On a visit to England last summer, Juliana asked Dutch reporters not to mention that King George had taken her to the Royal Ascot races. That vulgar youth Don Juan, youngest son of the ex-King of Spain, relates that when not so long ago he tipsily teased Crown Princess Juliana about her sturdy legs, Julian replied: 'It is only proper that they should be strong, as I am the sole support of the House of Orange.'

Today buxom Juliana is 26. Her prompt marriage is imperative and a burning issue in The Netherlands. For the good of the white race British Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin is said to have, in common with Dutch Premier Hendriwus Colijn, a prayerful hope that George V's sole remaining bachelor son, the Duke of Gloucester, and Crown Princess Juliana may someday see their way clear to the Atlar.

NOTHING NEW TO TELL

Some people shouldn't be allowed to meet boats .... and they are the ones who have been on boats themselves.

You've taken a trip. You've been to Paris let's say. And one of these pills meets you at the dock. She waves as the boat lurches into port, and you're thrilled to see a familiar face in the crowd. You're bursting to tell somebody right away the highlights of your trip.

And then you get ashore. 'My dear,' she says, 'did you have a good trip?' Before you can say anything more than 'Marvelous!' she's off. 'Now, when we were in Paris,' she says, 'the concierge—you know we stayed in a pension, it's so much more interesting You try to get a word in about what your concierge said to you. But she's hanging on doggedly. You decide that there will be others, once you get home, to whom you can tell your tale.

Perhaps you will, my pretty hopefuls. I'm pretty cynical. Every one, you'll find, has been to Paris before you. The only remedy I can think of isn't going to be of much help to you ——but it ought to ease matters for future generations. When some one else goes to Paris, be it four or ten years from now, keep your own trip locked in your heart.

MANY TOURISTS IN CANADA

'Reports from all over the country indicate that there is a considerable increase over last year.' They say: 'Some parts of Canada have actually had an increase as great as 80 per cent. when compared with last year's counts of tourist automobiles. But the average for the country, as a whole, will be between 25 and 30 percent.'

'Ontario's Dionne quintuplets alone have proved to be a drawing card worth a great deal of money to the province,' Mr. Dolan said. 'They are responsible for bringing thousands of visitors to Northern Ontario. There are close to 2,000 people a day who call at the quintuplets' home.'

'The beauty of it is,' he added, 'that while the visitors will naturally talk about the quints when they go home, they'll also tell their friends something about the wonderful scenery of Northern Ontario.'

Mr. Dolan is on the way back to Ottawa after having attended he Canadian Day held in Old Orchard, Me., Saturday.

'They have thousands of Canadian cars down there every Summer,' he said, 'and their official bureau certainly tries to reciprocate. It, in turn, directs thousands of American motorists up into Canada.'

GALLI CURCI

Amelita Galli-Curci, her neck swathed in bulky bandages, trilled a few cadenzas in her bed at Henrotin Hospital today over the protests of two frightened nurses.

The famous coloratura soprano, recovering from a goiter operation, wanted to find out 'how it sounds without the potato.'

Several years ago she nicknamed the growth 'my potato.'

One of the nurses murmured that it was 'just wonderful, madame.'

'Wonderful?' said the diva with mock pain. 'It sounds like a buzz saw hitting a rusy nail.'

But, although Galli-Curci feared the richness of her voice might be lost and she would have to undergo the rigorous training of a beginner again, her surgeon was optimistis.

'We are more certain than ever that her voice will be restored to its former clarity and volume,' said Dr. Arnold H. Kegel.

After testing her voice Mme. Galli-Curci lunched on an 'invalid's meal' of frankfurters, sauerkraut and beer.

THE SUMMER SCHOOL GIRL

There's something about a girl who comes to New York for summer school that makes her avid for adventure. We don't know what it is. Repression, or pent up spirits, or something. But it's not an easy complex to handle if the girl happens to know you. She wants to go places. She wants to see real New York. How the natives really live. So you take her to lunch where you usually eat lunch, and describe some of the natives around you. But her face falls. 'Is that all?' she says as you leave.

So then you take her to the Village. You choose a place with drawings on the wall, and point out all the bearded artists and all the long-haired poets—even though the beards and long bobs may belong to lawyers. And still she looks sad eyed and says, 'Is that all?'

All right. Give her what she wants. Our remedy is to take her down to the Bowery, pick a nice dark dank saloon doorway, and shove her in. Tell her that's New York, and you'll wait outside. After that, we'll wager, she'll be thrilled to death with a tea room.

CURE FOR ARTHRITIS

Hugh Walpole has just landed in this country. He is on his way to Hollywood where he is going to assist in filming 'Oliver Twist.' Mr. Walpole has a very pleasant personalty in spite of being an author.

He was telling his interviewers of a wonderful cure for Arthritis.

Being sorely afflicted with it, he had tried all kinds of remedies among others having all of his teeth out.

Finally his valet brought him a bottle marked 'Kleano,' and begged him to try it. He was willing to try anything, so he took it. It tasted like dead fish, but it cured him. A Scotch physician made the formula. It is now called rumari, and he advises all who are thus afflicted, to follow his example.

CIRCUS IN TOWN TODAY

The Walter L. Main Circus which will exhibit in Chestertown one day only Saturday, August 24 has many features this season that are not carried by other circuses, as Mr. Main, the man who is the directing genius of this vast enterprise, has the distinction of being acquainted with more circus performers than any other circusman in the business, and it has been said by many performers who have reached the top that if it had not been for the generosity of Mr. Main they would never have the chance to show their ability and get the start that finally led them to stardom in the circus profession. Hence, the Walter L. Main Circus can command the best there is in the way of acts at the start of each season, this being the fifty-second annual tour of the Main Circus

One of the outstanding features this season is the Cane-Grant troupe of acrobats and Horizontal bar performers who do the most impossible feats on those swaying, bending, slender pieces of seasoned maple bars, which the spectators expect to see snap in two at any minute as they sway back and forth, as the troupe leaps from one slender bar to another in perfect rhythm keeping the audience gasping for their safety right up to the very moment of their whirlwind finish of death-defying feats.

There are many high class features to be seen in the full two hours' performance, and it has been said that the variety of acts this season are of such high calibre that the critics find it hard and alike taking it upon themselves to name any particular group of performers as being a feature over the other.

There will be two performances at 2 and 8 p. m., rain or shine with free acts bein presented in front of the big tent both afternoon and night, one hour before the doors open.

Officer (to colored driver who had been whipping his horse): Don't whip him, man—talk to him.

Driver (to horse, by way of opening the conversation): Ah comes from N'Awleans, Where does you come from?

Geraldine—I tried it the other night and I counted a black one, and when I got to thinking of you I couldn't go on with the count.
