JERRY

They were famous friends Jack and Jerry. One rarely saw one without the other. Jack was a fair haired active boy, and Jerry was his dog.

Jack had many friends, but Jerry was his chief pal. No one enjoyed the games that the boys played more than he. He would bound away for the ball bringing it back to them, and his bark could be heard above their shouts when a game was won.

There were others in Jack's family that Jerry loved; sweet sister Maud who was Jack's grown sister and the gentle mother, and the father who always cared for him too, but Jack was his master and his love.

When Jack was reading and studying Jerry would sit for hours watching him, hoping always that he would put the book aside and come and play with him. There was one sport that Jerry could not share. Jack was a great climber and he would often climb to the top of the highest trees and call to Jerry. Jerry never enjoyed it. He would bark and bark up to him, begging him to come down. And one day when Jack had reached the top of a tall tree the limb on which he was standing, broke and down he fell. There he lay on the ground white and still, Jerry ran to him, and knowing there was something wrong he went barking to the house and finding the mother there he pulled at her dress and then looked pleadingly up to her face. She seeing that something was wrong, followed the dog and found her boy lying senseless on the ground.

The days that followed were sad ones for Jerry. The Doctor's car was often at the door and a white robed nurse was always in Jack's room.

Jerry took up his station at the door and no power could keep him away. Maud would take him down stairs in her arms and feed him, but he would be back in a few minutes. One day when the door was left ajar, he crept into the room and, went up to the bed. But Jack did not know him. Just then the nurse came and turned the destressed little fellow out. So during the sick boy's long illness his faithful pal waited for him outside of the door.

It was a happy time for Jerry when Jack was rolled out in the porch and he could be with him once more.

And when Jack grew strong enough to be out of doors again, and could run and romp with him his joy knew no bounds.

One night several years after Jerry was sleeping as usual outside of Jack's door when he waked up suddenly. Something was wrong. He knew he must wake the family. So he barked with all his might. Jack's father got up and scolded him for making so much noise, but he kept on barking loudly.

Then the father smelled smoke and knew the house was on fire. Hastily they gave the alarm. Jack was awakened just in time, for the flames were eating their way into his room. The firemen came and did what they could but the fire had made such headway that they could save very little.

'Thank God we are all here' said the father as he stood with his family around him watching their lovely home go up in smoke.

'But father where is Jerry?' wailed Jack. The little dog was not there. Where was he? They began a search for him but could not find him, he must have been overcome and burned in the fire.

'Had it not been for him we would have all perished' said th fathr. Poor little Jerry.'

GARDEN PARTIES

When the mosquitoes start going after you at a lawn party, it's pretty hard to know what to do. The hostess is so likely to be immune. We never met a hostess who wasn't.

They say it isn't nice to scratch in public. But if you haven't learned yet how to grin and bear a mosquito bite, we advise a few surreptitious scratches. Sometimes you can wander around the gardene and sneak in a good scratch behind the bushes. Sometimes you can engage your neighbors in a serious argument about Ethiopia or something, and while they're getting hot under the collar, you can reach down to your ankle quickly and give it a pinch.

But we think maybe you should go to your lawn parties forewarned and forearmed. Perhaps if you mixed a little anti-mosquito lotion with your perfume you would have a peaceful tea. Or you might just boldly take a bottle of citronella along, and at the sign of the first mosquito flash it in your hostess' face. Perhaps next time she'll serve tea on her screened porch.

SKIRTS TO BE SHORTER

Skirt lengths are shorter for daytime, but not radically or universally so, and there is a trend to make them shorter for evening. These, despite contradictory cables and head lines, are the facts sifted from the French collections now that they have all been shown.

And in th daytime you will look slim with enormous sleeves to broaden you at the top. Necks are high for daytime. There is much use of belts and soutache braid. And periods borrowed from discreetly, however, are the Renaissance, the Greek the Russian, and modern with a military dash to it.

There is much use of pleats, although they are often suggested as well as actually shown. Vionnet, however, has done a daytime skirt entirely knife-pleated.

For evening skirts are draped with a slim line. There are fewer trains, and the hemline is gradually going up, sometimes it escapes the floor, sometimes it reaches the instep, and sometimes only the ankle. Although skirts are long, the leg is often exposed by the use of slits. Decolletes are decidedly low and shoulder straps are narrow. Beads and sequins are introduced. And there is a fashion for which the American woman will be thankful—street length dinner frocks have been indorsed.

RECIPES

Orange Marmalade.

1 orange.
1 grapefruit.
1 lemon.

Cut the fruit into fine strips, removing the seeds. Measure, add three times the amount of water and allow to stand for twenty-four hours. Boil until the skins are tender. Measure, add equal amount of sugar and boil until very thick. Pack and seal.

Cabbage

The most delicious fried cabbage I ever ate was shedded with a couple of onions and green peppers, and fried and steamed in a regular fried chicken pan; you know, the deep skillet with tight-fitting cover and self-baster effect. It was stirred not more than once or twice during the cooking time.

Fall Is Coming

Gather some dry leaves that have fallen off trees. Place a layer of them in a box or barrel and on top of this put a layer of beets, or carrots, or turnips and repeat this process until the box or barrel has been filled. Vegetables stored in this way remain fresh all winter.

Frozen Rice Pudding

1 cup cooked rice
2 egg yolks
1 cup crushed pineapple
2 cups milk
1-4 cup sugar
1 cup whipped cream

Scald milk in upper vessel of double boiler. Beat egg yolks and sugar until light, pour milk over them stirring continually, return to boiler and cook over hot water until mixture thickens and coats back of spoon. Add rice and pineapple and when cold, fold in whipped cream, turn into trays of refrigerator and freeze. Unmold and serve plain or with additional crushed or sliced pineapple, if desired. Yield: eight servings.

Missouri River Boat Aids In Fighting Farm House Fire From the Topeka Capital

The government work boat, the Sergeant Floyd, a few days ago increased its functions and went in for fire fighting. The boat was passing on the Missouri River as a tenant house on the farm of George Hutson was burning on the west bank, eight miles south of Atchison. The steamer tied up at the bank ran out about 300 feet of hose and its crew of fifteen joined farmer neighbors of Hutson, called from their threshing, in fighting the flames. The house burned, but the river men and farmers succeeded in saving the barn and other buildings.

Watch Your Kidneys!

Be Sure They Properly Cleanse the Blood

YOUR kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as nature intended—fail to remove impurities that poison the system when retained.

Then you may suffer nagging backache, dizziness, scanty or too frequent urination, getting up at night, swollen limbs; feel nervous, miserable—all upset.

Don't delay! Use Doan's Pills. Doan's are especially for poorly functioning kidneys. They are recommended by grateful users the country over. Get them from any druggist.
