NOW AND THEN

OUR FEATHERED FRIENDS

By ALICE MATHEWS

The Robin, Bluebird and the Wren,
Good-bye must sing to us again!
For droopingly upon Life's Lawn
Old mystic Autumn now is drawn:
And every little bird sad stays
A-getting ready for Fall-lays
Upon a hasty Southern route
A-nodding their farewell about!
The Bluebird dressed in perfect taste
Sings out, 'I have no time to waste.'
The little Wren a brown wrap wears,
And sings to hide his family cares.
The Robin lingers 'till the snow
Makes him sing hurriedly, 'let's go!'
Methinks migration deeply stirred
Lives in the heart of every bird.
These lovely songsters fly away
Swiftly and happily to stay
Until the Springtime comes again,
The Robin, Bluebird and the Wren;
Then a great host—a singing-fleet
Will make Spring's feathered choir complete.

The opening meeting of the Women's Literary Society, met in the Public Library last Friday afternoon, All the members expressed themselves as being glad to be together again.

As, is the custom, the retiring President, Miss Belle Emory entertained in honor of the incoming president, Miss Bessie Nicholson.

The Club face a very busy fall and winter as it has the Public Library to maintain, which means rent for building, Librarians salary and buying new books, so it requires much thought and ingenuity to raise the money.

The late lamented Bill Rogers never hesitated to say that he had Indian blood in his veins. Once, when in Boston, he was asked by a young man who was boasting of his ancestry whether his forefathers' had come over in the Mayflower, 'No,' drawled Mr. Rogers, 'but they met the boat.'

There was in England, a famous clown by the name of Walker. He had a real talent for training animals and he was always sought by the circus managers, as he was such a popular number.

But the animals were not always reliable. After spending much time in training cats, he brought them out and at his command they all sat on their little stools, but alas! before the act began, some one up in the gallery barked like a dog and away the whole lot of them ran.

But his favorite animal was a donkey who would bray when ever he heard music. Walker spent much time training him. After his trick was over, the donkey was treated to a lump of sugar, which it dearly loved.

The fame of this musical donkey spread far and near, and finally Queen Victoria sent Walker word that she was anxious to hear him. So the time was set, and he was taken before her majesty.

But the floor was sprinkled with tan bark, something the donkey was not accustomed to, and Walker feeling nervous, before the Queen, forget to give the donkey the lump of sugar, so it refused to bray when the band struck up 'Behold the conquering hero comes,' but ran around the ring in a bad temper. The queen waved her hand and said, 'It is enough, take him away.' So donkey and master went out very crestfallen. Walker is now eighty-four, and no longer trains animals, but when the circus comes again to London, the people demand his presence.

He looks not at all like a clown now, but more like a Roman senator with his abundant white hair and his Roman nose.

Success

Once upon a time I planned to be
An artist of celebrity;
A song I thought to write one day,
And all the world would homage pay;
I longed to write a noted book
But what I did—was learn to cook.
For life with simple tasks is filled,
And I have done—not what I willed.
Yet when I see boy's hungry eyes,
I'm glad I make good apple pies.

—Elizabeth A. Thomas

The Last Word

"Yes," said the boastful young man, "my family can trace its ancestry back to William the Conqueror."

"I suppose," remarked his friend, "you'll be telling us that your ancestors were in the Ark with Noah?"

"Certainly not," said the other. "My people had a boat of their own."—Tid-Bits Magazine.

Omaha is an outstanding horse today.

And in the cigarette world Chesterfield is outstanding.

Both won their place strictly on merit.

Apply any test you like—Chesterfields stand for the best there is in cigarettes.

They are milder . . . yet they let you know you're smoking. They taste better—give you real pleasure.

Quiet and relax them with the same medicine that "did the work" for this Colorado girl.
