Women'sPage

O, Woman! in our hours of ease,
Uncertain, coy, and hard to please;
As fickle as the shade,
By the light quivering Aspen made,
When pain and anquish wring the brow,
A ministering angel, thou.

'War is necessary,' said a kind affectonate woman one day, 'for if we did not have it, there would be more people in the world than could be fed.

Her listeners said nothing, knowing that she had a son in the Navy, and knew that she had absorbed his propergnda.

It seems that Mussolini has the same opinion, for, he complains that they need more land for the Italian people. And so he has sent his brave soldiers into Ethiopia to fall a prey to all the perils of a dry tropical country where not only they are killed in war, but are laid low by disease, hunger and thirst. And Ethiopia belongs, not tc the Italians, but to the Ethiopia. therefore the former have no right to take their country from them.

War is murder which ever way one can put it, only murder by the wholesale where a man is made a hero, if he kills a great many of the enemy, and then, if in times of peace, he kills one it is murder and he is punished for it.

'Magnum Bonum,' 'Peace, the greatest thing in the world,' they say, and yet the nations stand by, and see injustice and crime done, when they know that they might avert it by giving up something themselves.

This is house cleaning time so it is a good thing to fill the Women's Column with advice about that most important job. The first thing is, 'Do not do it all at once' for you not only wear yourself out, but you make your men folks who certainly have a right to a comfortable place to sit and read their papers after the days work is done, very unhappy and uncomfortable

Do Not Scrub Floor

Frequently we read an article where the advice is given to scrub an old floor with water to remove the various coats of grime. This is most unwise since water, if it reaches the actual wood, will not only warp the floor boards but will raise the grain of the wood.

After the floor is thoroughly cleaned and dry, if it is desired to have it remain in its natural wood color, all open cracks should be filled with a crack-filler, these to be found for every kind of wood. This filler should be allowed to dry, when the floor is then ready for a coat of wax. This will give a durable finish which can be built up into a permanent one by the weekly waxing with the natural beauty of the unstained wood showing clearly.

Where a floor is to be given a new color, thenan oil stain (can be bought ready mixed in any color) should be applied directly to the bare wood. After this is thoroughly dry, a thin coat of shellac or varnish must used to bind the stain. Two coats of either the varnish or shellac are generally necessary, two thin coats being far better than one heavy one. After the first coat, the floor should be sandpapered lightly with 00 paper, then carefully dusted before applying the second coat.

To Enamel Furniture

In enameling a piece of furniture, the enamel must never be used directly on bare wood. Two coats of flat paint must first be put on. To give a dull finish to enamel, rub it with felt dipped in pulverized pumice stone, and water. And when varnishing or enameling furniture, the sme rules as to temperature and dust mentioned for floors must be obeyed.

When varnishing, painting, staining or enameling a chair a table, begin by turning it upside down and do the inside of legs, rungs, etc., first, if you would save time and vexation of spirit. Varnish and enamel should be brushed on as little as possible, as they thicken under the brush, and the surface will appear lumpy if brushed again and again. Brush lightly in one direction and, after each stroke, wipe out the brush on the edge of the can to prevent too much material being on the brush.

Avoid Double Chins

We have heard that the queen of Italy has never allowed her children to sleep on a pillow; for she thinks it not only tends to make them round shouldered, but also is apt to induce double chins. And those who have seen the young princesses say their posture is so good, while they hold up their heads and look tall whether they are or not.

The Teeth

Take good care of your teeth. Watch your gums and give them a daily massage. It will go a long way towards making them healthy. Use a dental thread between your teeth night and morning. And keep your mouth clean by a regular gargle, salt and water is good, also deluted listerine. One of the most effective, some have found, is equal parts of tincture of myrrh and spirits of camphor diluted in water. Whatever you use, see that you use it regularly and you will find it helps very much towards preserving your teeth and keeping healthy gums.

Where There Are Small Children

IT'S "AN ECONOMICAL NECESSITY"

Writes This Milton, Del., Mother

EASTERN SHORE
PUBLIC SERVICE CO.:

I have been the proud possessor of an electric range for the past two years. I find electric cookery, the most satisfactory type that I have ever used. It is both clean and safe. The latter is of great importance to me, as I have three small children,

Even with the electric cooking, making of formulas, and boiling of bottles required for small children, I do not consider my range an expensive luxury, but rather an economical necessity in the home.

Sincerely yours,
(Signed) MILDRED H. SNOWBERGER.

Remember, This is Fire Prevention Week

FOR THOSE WHO REMAIN

When death visits a home, the first concern is to perform the last service to the loved one in a becoming manner. What ever is done must express all the reverance and affection that is felt at such a time. But in addition to this a further responsibilty rests upon the funeral director. It is his privilege and duty to lessen as far as lies with in his power, the burdens laid upon those who remain. By countless little acts of thoughtfulness he can make the way easier for them.

We consider this part of our work as important as any other. Our highest aim is to have our patrons look upon us as trusted friends, ready and anxious to render sympathetic assistance to those who remain behind.
