NOW AND THEN

TOAST

Here's to October—that rollicking elf,
Capering madly—in love with himself.

Shaking the bells on his harlequin suit,
Gathering nuts for the squirrels to loot;

Veiling the hills with a violet haze,
Stealing an hour from the glorious days;

Staring above till the crystalline sky
Mirrors and catches the blue of his eye;

Touching the leaves with the gold and the red
Left where the rainbow dissolved overhead.

Hey for October—the mischievous elf
Who loves the bright world and his gay, laughing self!

ELEANOR GRAHAM,
Taken from the New York Times.

October is always beautiful, with its many lovely shades of leaves, its golden sunlight and blue skies. And it not only reigns in beauty in the daytime, but the brilliant moon makes night as beautiful as the day. It is the Hunter's moon and stays with us longer than the moons of other months.

There is a new heir to the English throne, a fine boy born to the Duke and Duchess of Kent, the first boy grand Child of the King of England The Duchess of Kent is considered the most beautiful of all the prinesses in England now, and she and the Duke of Kent are very congenial, both loving music and sports.

The new prince is eighth in succession to the throne, next of course is the Prince of Wales, then the Duke of York and his two daughters next the Duke of Gloucester who is soon to be married, after him the Duke of Kent the father of the new born prince.

So it does not seem to be much chance for the little fellow to come to the throne though many stranger things have happened.

A great concourse of people gathered before building No. 10 in Wall St. last week. Policemen were busy keeping the crowd back as it grew larger and larger.

And what was the sight that attracted so much attention? It was a great electric eye placed so that it shone on the entrance doors. These doors were tightly shut, but as soon as the shadow of a man or women customer fell upon the door, it would immediately open. A robot worth while, but as the people gazed, they realized that before many years, one more job would be taken from the workers—that of doorkeeper.

A man sat reading in a street car some time ago. Near his seat was a well filled suit case. So absorbed was he in his book, that he did not see that the street car was passing his destination. Then suddenly looking up, he made a dash for the door.

An accommodating passenger, sitting near by, seeing the suit case, seized it and rushed after the departing man. 'He has taken my suit case,' screamed a third man as he ran after him. So the three met, and after much explaining, they went their several ways the accommodating passenger, a sadder but wiser man.

More cigarettes are smoked today because more people know about them—they are better advertised.

But the main reason for the increase is that they are made better—made of better tobaccos; then again the tobaccos are blended—a blend of Domestic and Turkish tobaccos.

Chesterfield is made of mild, ripe tobaccos. Everything that science knows about is used in making it a milder and better-tasting cigarette.

We believe you will enjoy them.
