Caloric Conservator
THE WONDER HEATER!

KEY TO CROSS-SECTION DIAGRAM OF CONSERVATOR HEATER

A. Air from below grates enters here, forcing volatile elements downward.
B. Cold room air that entered at base of casing is heated and emerges here, causing circulating pressure to force warm air throughout house.
C. Coal baked here. Volatile elements driven down.
D. Louvres and slits in firebrick ignite mixture.
E. Coal reaches main combustion chamber as almost pure carbon.
F. Air-tight ash pit. All entering air is measured through controls.
G. Control clutch disengages thermostat while ashes are removed.
H. Primary air thermostat acts on room temperature.
I. Temperature regulator dial.
J. Mixture diverted to achieve thorough combustion.
K. Secondary air thermostat admits measured amount of pre-heated air—the secret of most efficient combustion.
L. Volatile elements mix with secondary air from manifold and burn in auxiliary combustion chamber.
M. Cool air in house drawn in here to be heated.
