Expert Shows Kent Dairymen How To Use Home Grown Feeds

Making full use of home-grown hay this winter and improved pastures next summer were recomended to Kent County dairymen as the best means of solving present feed grain shortages at the dairy cattle feeding school for dairy farmers held on Wednesday, November 17th at Chestertown. This school was sponsored by the county extension service with J. D. McVean as County Agent and was conducted by Professors Magruder and Hyatt of the Univesity of Maryland. About 40 dairy farmers from the county attended sessions of the school.

Good quality hay, said the University Specialists, is the safest and cheapest feed for dairy cows in winter, and if plenty of it is made available to the cows it will go a long way in replacing of the grain which is usually fed. A ton of good hay is worth about two-thirds as much in nutritive value as one ton of a concentrate mixture. It was pointed out that a maximum of hay should be used in all rations for calves and heifers and lower producing cows so that as much grain as possible will be available for feeding the higher producing cows.

In discussing the feed situation now faced by farmers, it was pointed out by Professor Hyatt that with present feed supplies and numbers of livestock on farms it is simply impossible for everyone to obtain all the concentrate ingredients needed. As a result, he advised all farmers to become as self-sufficient as possible by producing a maximum of feed on their own farms, especially hay, silage and pasture crops. Dairymen had a chance to study the effect of quality hay as affected by stage of cutting and method of handling upon its feeding value.

Dairymen were much interested in how their farm-grown grains could be used to best advantage in grain mixtures this winter. Suggestions were given for conserving protein supplies and how to use soybeans to the best advantage.

The two most important feed production problems on dairy farms in Maryland, according to Professor Magruder, are a satisfactory full-pasture program and a postive and economical way of making hay during unfavorable curing weather to avoid both loss in quality or complete loss of hay. Ways of meeting these problems were considered. Dairymen were advised to study carefully the recent development in barn curing of hay before investiug in other drying equipment involving much expense.

This subject of substiute dairy feeds is particularly important now as already the shortage of ready mixed feed is being felt here. Kent's summer hay crop will help materially to keep milk production up this winter.

Swepson Earl Died Suddenly

Swepson Earl, a native of Queen Anne's County, died suddenly in his sleep at his home in Baltimore Sunday morning last. Mr. Ear became prominent in the Stae of Maryland as an employee of the Conservation Commission and later as Chairman in his advocacy of scientific research as a solution of the conservation of crabs and oysters in the bay. He was largely responsible for the scientific discoveries that are now being used in the propagation of the seafood industry, not only in Maryland but along the entire Atlantic Seaboard. His fight along these lines was an uphill one that made for him many enemies in the seafood industry.

Mr. Earle, who resigned last year as a Navy Reserve commander after an attack of pneumonia — he was administrative officer at the Navy Proving Ground, Dahlgren, Va.—apparently was in good health when he retired Saturday night.

Juniors Study The Constitution

In these troubled times a strong national government is necessary. We take our Constitution for granted, but few of us realize how important it is, for it is the basis of our government. A study of the Constitution reveals that it is a document carefully written to secure the liberties we wished to obtain.

The 3-A History class is studying the Constitution. They have memorized the preamble and are studying the articles and amendments. This will give them a better understanding of our government.

Senior Committees

Every year it has been a custom for the Senior class to elect two chairmen for the purpose of selecting the class flower, motto and colors. A meeting was held by the Senior class on October 10, 1943 in order to announce the elected chairman.

The chairman elected for selecting the class motto was Betty Payne, and for the flower and color, Betty Pinder.

The two elected chairmen were free to appoint any Senior to be on their Committeee consisting of no more than four members on each.

The members of the committees are as foolws: chairman of Motto Betty Payne.

Members of the Committee — Betty Kimble, Hazel Jones, Anne Emerson.
