thropic minded friends in that part of our development is never to be forgotten, and we are anticipating that a similar proof of the belief of our friends in us will provide a speedy completion of this magnificent plan.

"In the meantime, architects and engineers are busy on the details of the plans, and it will be a great day in College history when we see the sod of the Triangle broken up next Spring by workmen beginning the realization of Washington College's present great dream."

Reports filed at the Board meeting indicate that the College, in spite of the war, has continued its unbroken record of more than twenty years of a balanced budget, with no deficits. The enrollment is reported thirty percent above last year's with many more returning veterans expected next semester.

Mr. Montgomery Opens Real Estate Office

It is learned that the E. A. Strout Realty Agency, Inc., the oldest and largest country real esate agency in the world, has appointed Mr. Arthur C. Montgomery as it's local associate, with office in the telephone building.

Mr. Montgomery is a native of the Eastern Shore and has long been a keen student of it's life and historical heritage. It's old farmsteads and homes are especially interesting and he is entirely happy, he says, while wandering among them.

The Strout plan is a sort of co-operative effort wherein the local representative lists county real estate and the home office advertises desirable places in catalogues and newspapers. All representatives are bonded for the protection of all clients.

Although they specialize in the sale of farms and homes they also handle the sales of many other types of properties, such as stores, garages, hotels, and industrial plants.
