FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 16, 1945

Next Thursday, November 22nd, has been officially designated as the annual Thanksgiving Day and what an opportunity the day affords. Originally set aside for the purpose of giving thanks at the end of the harvest season for the crops that had matured during the year, it also this year can do a double purpose for it marks the year in which the greatest of all world conflicts has come to an end, at this season last year, millions of Americans were in combat in foreign lands and those at home on Thanksgiving Day did not know definitely where they were or under what conditions they were living, if still alive. Today that part of the emergency is over and many of these men are safe at home with their families, others are receiving the best of medical care in adequate hospitals and those who will never return lie in countries that are again at peace. The families of those who are still serving in foreign soil can give thanks that these men and women are not in conflict or living under war conditions. It is truly a Thanksgiving Day that has been looked forward to for four years and in whatever way one may choose to observe it, there should be ample opportunity to sincerely give thanks.

Only one side to our railroad tracks

Folks who are better off in our town live on the west side of the railroad tracks. We've got a lake there, and the local park, and some real nice land.

There used to be a phrase "from the wrong side of the tracks." It meant what you think . . . but you don't hear it any more. Not since Charlie Jenkins came home with the Purple Heart, and Willie Wells got the Silver Star. There isn't any "wrong side" of the railroad tracks now!

And that change is going on all over America . . . where our heroes have come from obscure homes . . . and greatness has overshadowed wealth and shallow social [illegible]
