

WOMANS' COLUMN

The Legislature has been hard on women in placing a high tax on all cosmetics; all the little things that adorn her person.

Some one has said: 'Women ought every morning to put on the slippers of humility, the skirt of decorum, the stays of charity, the garters of steadfastness, the pins of patience.' Just think of a woman thus clothed in these days of equal rights for women.

Long time ago William Allen Butler said: 'Supposing a man had the wealth of the Czar.

Of the Russias to boot for the rest of his days. On the whole do you think he would have much to spare. If he married a woman with nothing to wear?

THE ANTHONY EDENS

There is something very interesting about the Anthony Edens. He is the busy foreign secretary of Great Britain. Handsome as a picture, and with a gift of persuasiveness he might have chosen an easy care free life but he has taken upon himself the weighty cares that the foreign secretary of Great Britain must entail. It is hard on his pretty birdlike wife too. Although the Edens keep mostly to themselves in their private life, she was prevailed upon to address the 'Conservative Women's Society' last week, she calls herself a diplomatic widow for whenever there is something planned for them to do together, some urgent work calls him away. She had to give up her hobby of her husband. And last week just as they were about to attend the wedding of her sister, he was forced to go to Geneva leaving his small wife a page at his aunt's wedding.

They are very retiring, and hate the sight of a camera, so Mrs. Anthony stays out of the limelight and devotes much time to her two little sons, while her husband is devoting his time to trying to get Mussolini to stop the war in Ethiopia. It is a vital question to Great Britain for she has great possessions there. The King of Egypt died this week, leaving his young son as heir to his throne.

VEILS

The veils this season are most intriguing. They have a piece of elastic on top, and can be worn with any hat. There is nothing that adds to the dressiness of a hat, as a pretty veil.

NOW AND THEN

A thing of beauty is a joy forever. Its loveliness increases. Such the sun, the moon, Trees old and young; sprouting a shady boon For simple sheep; and such are daffodils With the green world they live in.

A nature poet was Keats the birds the flowers, the trees awaking in him beautiful thoughts. It is sad to think of one so frail in body and so sensitive to criticism having to withstand hardships and the severe criticism of the contemporary poets. But though he exclaimed, 'My name will be writ in water,' and though he died young, his name is living still, and his poems will endure as long as English Literature is extant.

HOBBIES

Some one has written: 'The happy are those who have work they love and a hobby of a totally different kind which they love even better.'

Perhaps it was knowing this that caused the president of the Women Literary Club to ask all of the members to tell what is their special hobby and if possible to bring the result of following it. What a great variety of hobbies there was. Some for searching old records, some digging and cultivating flowers one making a specialty of the Narcissus family, another making scrap books, one planting water lilies others loving poetry, one making jewelry and many making handwork their hobby. And then the club was shown the result of these. A lovely collection of fancy work jewelry, scrap books, an antique chair caned; and one even went so far as to bring specimen of her millinery work, which, though it showed ingenuity and genius, would hardly compete with the hat makers in town. Although it was a most enjoyable get together.

The Club adjourned on Friday, to meet again the first Friday in October.

Mahomet writes:

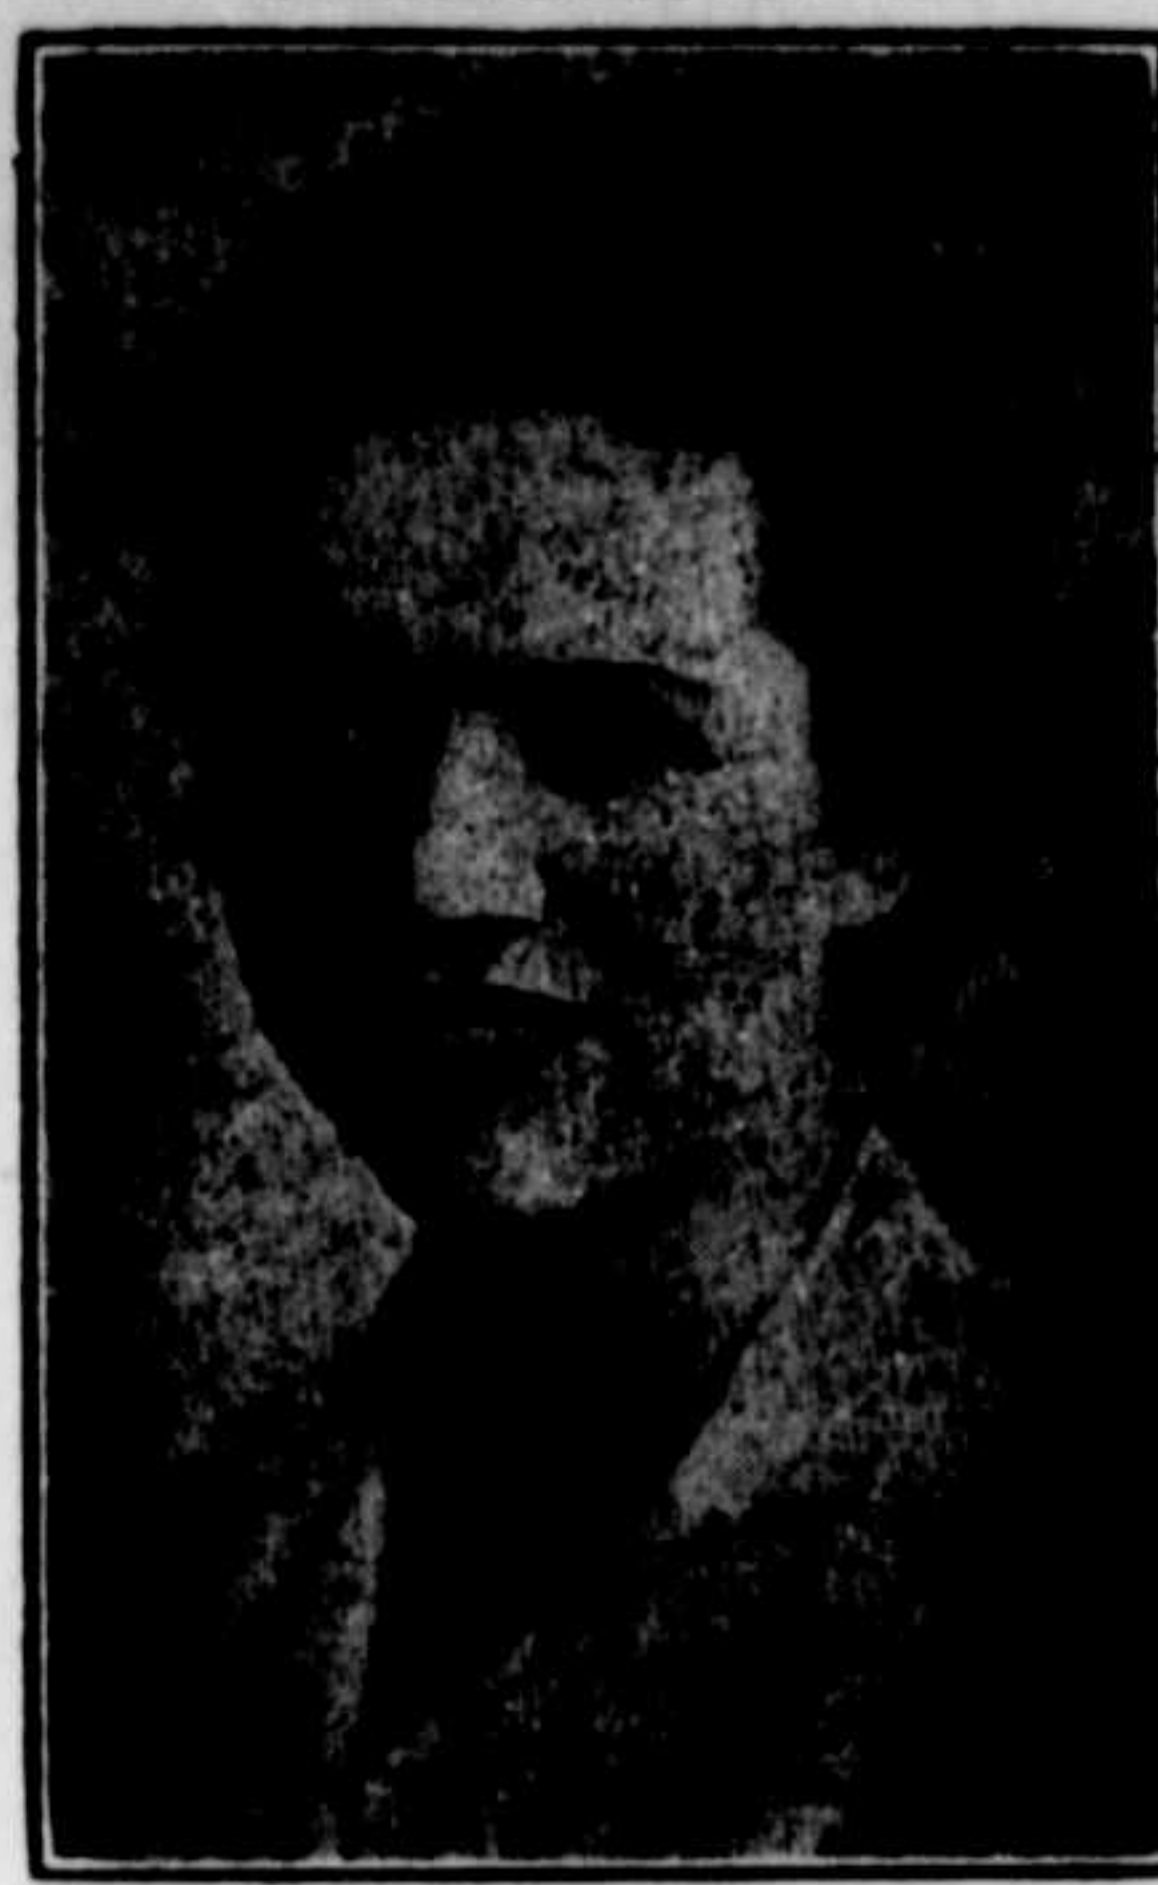

He that has two cakes of bread let him sell one for some flowers of the narcissus; for bread is food for the body, but Narcissus is the food of the soul.

A pair of wrens have taken up their abode in the wren house that has been vacant for some time. It is true that many tenants have applied but the sparrows have found it impossible to squeeze their bodies in such a tiny door. But today the new family moved in at the early hour of 5 a. m.

Such a happy pair they are, at the idea of raising a family. It will be a busy life, little wrens, when the family does come for a young brood has a great appetite for worms and it will take all your time to find food for them so now is the time for you to sing.

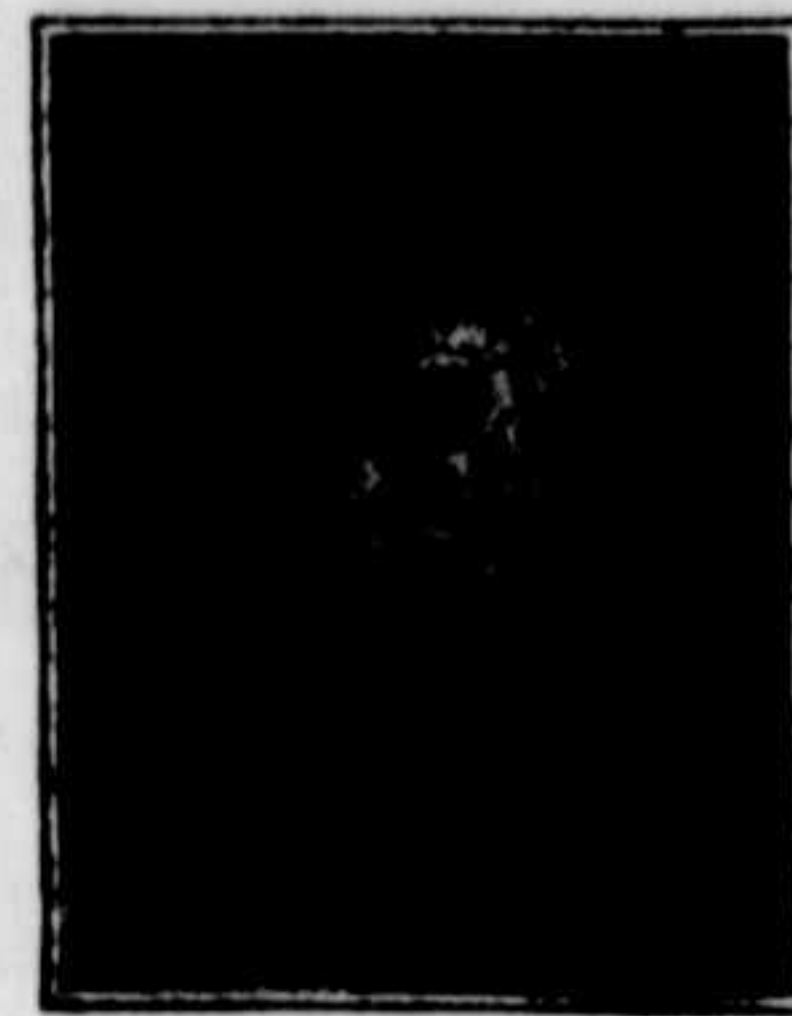

Mrs. Evelyn Harris' book, 'The Barber Lady' seems to have taken with the hotel proprietors all over the country. We hope that it may bring her happiness and success.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

She has conducted many successful revivals in our churches both in the New Jersey and in the Wilmington Conference, having been very recently in meetings in Perryville, and in the East in now closing a series of very successful meetings at North East, Md.

Possessing a voice of attractive sweetness, backed by a winsome personality, Mrs. Wolfson is producing an outstanding success in the evangelistic field. Those who have heard the stirring story of her life, how she was forced from her home because she became a Christian, and how her funeral was held by her parents, and how God has so remarkably taken care of her, and is using her to transform the lives

IN MEMORIAM

In sad but loving remembrance of my dear husband and our father, William H. Biggs who passed away 3 years ago April 11, 1933.

Time speeds on three years have passed. Since death its gloom, its shadows cast Within our home where all seemed bright And took from us a shining light.

We miss that light and ever will. His vacant place there is none can fill. Down here we mourn but not in vain. For up in Heaven we will meet again. By his loving wife and children.

Bell Telephone Switchboards Now (1936) And Then (1878)

Top: A modern telephone switchboard such as those serving Bell System telephones today throughout the country. The "lampshade" switchboard used in Richmond, Va., in 1882 (left), and (right) the first telephone switchboard installed at New Haven, Conn., January 28, 1878.

Sixty years ago when telephone service had its origin with a conversation held between Alexander Graham Bell, the inventor, and Thomas A. Watson, his assistant, there were only two telephones in the world. Several experiments following the initial conversation held March 10, 1876, resulted in private line telephone conversations over varying distances up to sixteen miles when a railroad dispatching wire was used November 25 of that year between Boston and Salem. It was not until January 28, 1878, that a switchboard system serving eight lines and 21 telephones was installed and operated at New Haven, Conn.

Within a short time telephone exchanges were placed in operation in principal cities and towns throughout the United States and by December 31, 1880, there were 47,880 Bell Telephone offices serving over 17,350,000 telephones which is more than 60 per cent of the total telephones in the world. So universal is telephone service today that conversations may be had with more than 65 countries and geographical locations throughout the world, and it is now possible to interconnect 93 per cent of the world's telephones. Last year telephone users in the United States made 25 billion telephone calls.

Telephone service in the United States, which has set a standard for the world in efficiency, is largely the result of research and development activities of the Bell Telephone Laboratories and resulting from these activities, telephone equipment in this country, including the apparatus on the subscribers' premises, switchboards, and associated central office equipment, and outside plant consisting of poles, wires, underground conduit, and cable has reached a high degree of perfection as compared with the crude apparatus used when telephone service was first established sixty years ago.

Something To Think Over!

EVERY one of us, now that warm weather has really come to stay, is sitting back, heaving a sigh of relief, and thankful that, at last, the old furnace isn't yelling for more Coal. It's a great feeling to toss on the last shovelful and face the summer months without a thought of filling that coal bin until fall. . . . But, wait a minute! Did you ever consider that the same thing must be gone through again next year, and wonder how you could escape it without going to Florida? . . . Well, we have an idea which will certainly ease the coal buying strain on your pocketbook. . . . Instead of spreading the cost of your coal pile over only eight months in the year, why don't you let these coming summer months cut in a little on the expense, and thereby ease the strain of mid-winter heating. Spread the cost of your coal over a twelve-month period! . . . You'll be surprised how it will relieve that "pocket-book" tension.
