NOW AND THEN

HAD I BUT ONE DAY

By ELAINE V. EMANS

Had I but one day of my life remaining,
Then should I see this generous world I love—
The dawn, the moon, the glorious color staining
The western sky, the stars serene above,
With clearer eye than ever I employ.
Then should I listen with acuter ear
And smell and taste and touch with sharper joy;
Then would so many things be newly dear.

Had I but one day of life yet to live,
I should be much more eager to forgive,
And sympathize and help and love and pray
Before the numbered hours had hurried past.
Ah, this is what they must mean when they say:
"Live every day as if it were the last."

JUNE

And so beautiful June has gone for another year. A lovely month it was! Lowell has said in rapture, "What is so rare as a day in June. If ever there come perfect days?" The long days, the radiant sunsets, the roses climbing every where, the happy song of the birds before they begin the arduous cares of house keeping all add to the enjoyment of this favorite month. And it is then the time when we love to go through the fields, overgrown with high grasses daisies and clover and wander "knee deep in June, watching the larks in their upward flight. Midsummer has much to offer in natures' gifts, but there is always a sigh in the heart when June bids us goodby.

THE SEVEN YEAR LOCUSTS

The seven year locusts have come and gone. Such a shrilling they made during the time, they were here.

The poor things seemed weak and defenceless, and so far have done little harm to the trees.

How the birds did enjoy eating them.

And the young ones after eating them grew so rapidly that they were actually crowded out of their nest before they were ready to fly.

Now the locust have gone leaving their eggs to germinate in the ground for another seventeen years.

"I love him for the enemies which he has made" said one man, of his friend.

Criticism is certainly not pleasant, but it often does us a world more good than praise.

This little poem was found somewhere with out the name of the author, so we are copying with an apology to the one who wrote it.

Criticism.

I know a man with smile so prim
Who gives the closest heed
To everything you say to him.
And murmurs, "Yes, indeed!"

I know another who will shout
In contradiction stroug,
No matter what you talk about.
And say, "Here's where you're wrong!"

I like the "yessing" man; and yet
In candor I admit
It's from the other that I get
The greater benefit.

WOMAN'S COLUMN

It is supposed that the majority of U. S. citizens, who were not able to attend either of the Conventions at Cleveland, and Philadelphia lent a listening ear to the radio. As the nominations of both parties were unimous there was not neary so much to it as usual, through the listeners in heard much about three long years and, in retaliation, twelve long year."

One thing impresses the hearers and that is how badly a women's voice carries over the radio. Certainly before they speak in the broadcast they should try to soften their voices.

They say that women will play a great part in the coming campaign, but if they wish to be effective they should remembr the saying of Shakespeare.

"A low sweet voice, an excellent thing in women."

Perhaps no life was sadder than that of the great Beethoven, that wonderful musical genius whose music goes singing down the ages.

It is told of him that one moon light night as he was passing along he heard one of his own musical compositions played in a very skillful manner. Opening the door of the house he saw a girl sitting at the piano. Appraching nearer, he saw she was blind. On questioning her she told him that the piece that she played was by Beethoven. "O, coud I but hear him!" she sighed.

Taking her place at the piano, he bebegan to improvise to his delighted listener. Then, leaving the house, he went to his room in the moonlight and wrote the composition down. That is how his celebrated moonlight sonato was composed.

Sad to relate Beethoven found that he was growing deaf. It was a terrible distress, and he worked day and night that he might give to the world the music that was singing in his soul.

His symponies are stately and beautiful, and his only opera, Fidelio, is far more musical than most of the operas composed by others.

THE SAME

The baseball game was over and one of the policemen on duty in the ground observed a man clambering over the wall instead of going out with the crowd through the gate in the usual way.

'Hi, there!' he shouted, 'Why can't you go out the same way as you came in?'

'That's what I am doing,' replied the man, as he disappeared.

POPPY—

Packed with thrills, laughs and action, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's melodrama, "Absolute Quiet," comes to the New Lyceum on Monday and Tuesday, July 6 and 7.

Featuring a cast of notables, including Lionel Atwill, Irene Hervey, Raymond Walburn, Stuart Erwin, Ann Loring, Louis Hayward, Wallace Ford, Bernadene Hayes, Robert Gleckler, Haryev Stephens and others, the picture concerns the adventures of a financier who goes to his Montana ranch for absolute quiet, after a hectic business career in which he has ruthlessly ruined people, socially and financially.

His moments of peace are shortlived for two escaped killers make his ranch their headquarters. And to top it off, a transcontinental air liner crashes into the flying field which adjoins the ranch. The two pilots are killed but the remaining passengers, who turn out to be the financier's bitter enemies, survive the crash.

George Seitz's direction keeps the picture moving at a perfect pace, while the production of Producer John W. Considine, Jr., is excellent.

All the players are outstanding in their portrayals. Hayward contributes a memorable moment in the dramatic scene in which he, as the screen star, learns that he has been scarred for life by the plane crash.

Harry Clark did a fine job in writing the screen play from the novel by George F. Worts.

The character he likes best, that of a lovable old faker who glories in bamboozling the public but who paves the way for the romance of a young couple, is given W. C. Fields in his carnival film, "Poppy," coming on Wednesday and Thursday, July 8 and 9 to the New Lyceum Theatre. It is the part he played in his first stage success, years ago.

Fields appears as a patent-medicine man and tent show follower who is the guardian of an eighteen-year-old girl, Rochelle Hudson. The girl has never known any other life.

When the two are operating a concession in a small town, Rochelle meets and falls in love with Richard Cromwell, son of the town's mayor. Fieds, meanwhile, has concocted a scheme to have his ward identified as a missing heiress so she can take over an unclaimed fortune in the town.

The scheme works for a time anr then is exposed. Rochelle, heiress for a day, is faced with the breaking up of her love affair, and relinquishing of her new home. Then a sudden turn of the plot brings a happy ending.

Cast members include such outstanding favorites as Lynne Overman, Catharine Doucet, Rasolind Keith and others. Taken from the first Fields stage triumph of years back, "Poppy" was directed by A. Edward Sutherland.

Nobody's Fool, the Umversal film starring Edward Everett Horton, at the New Lyceum Theatre on Friday and Saturday, July 10 and 11 as part of a double feature show, is a story about the dumbest or the cleverest man in town, depending on the viewpoint.

His lack of guile and his proclivity for putting his foot into situations where other folks would not dare to thrust a ten-foot pace, lifted him from the humble job of small town waiter to the position of leading Manhattan realtor.

Whenever he was called on to talk, he had one set speech, about better housing conditions. By sheer luck, or the Providence that watches over babies, fools and real estate promoters, he made that speech to a gathering of the leading operators in the metropolis. And they were impressed.

He got mixed up in a plan devised by real estate sharps, to gouge owners of property where title flaws could be shown. From this muddle, while facing the toughest gang of highbinders in town, the fellow everybody thought a dummy worked out an honest project for better housing conditions. He proved to be nobody's fool. His plan guaranteed a return to investors. Best of all, it gave decent livng conditions to people who had never known them before. Hollywood reports declare "Nobody's Fool" to be swift moving comedy.

Ken Maynard, called the King of the Cowboys, rides into the face of new dangers in Columbia's latest outdoor drama, "Fugitive Sheriff," which comes on Friday and Saturday, July 10 and 11 to the New Lyceum on part of a double feature show. It is said to be one of Maynard's most thrilling pictures, and that is saying a lot.

In "Fugitive Sheriff" Maynard will be seen as lader of the lay abiding element of a western town, who is elected sheriff and then falsely accused as a crimnal, being forced to flee for his life.

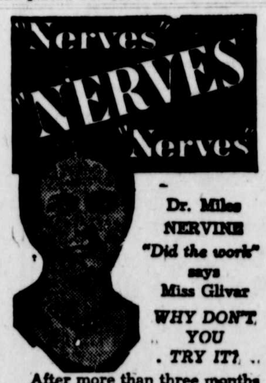

As the story unfolds, Maynard is forced through a series of dangerous adventures before he is able to round up the outlaw band, establish his innocence and win the girl of his heart.

Beth Marion, recently risen to stardom as a result of her outstanding performance in many western productions, is seen as Maynard's charming leading lady who helps her sweetheart defeat the criminals and recapture his place of honor among his fellowmen of the community.

Walter Miller, Hal Price and John Elliott have important roles in the strong cast of "Fugitive Sheriff," which was directed by Spencer Gordon Bennett, Nate Gatzert wrote the story and screenplay.

FORETHOUGHT

Nature is wonderful. A million years ago she didn't know we were going to wear glasses, yet look at the way she placed our ears.

Dr. Miles NERVINE "Did the work" says Miss Glivar

WHY DON'T YOU . TRY IT?

After more than three months of suffering from a nervous ailment, Miss Glivar used Dr. Miles Nervine which gave her such splendid results that she wrote us an enthusiastic letter.

If you suffer from "Nerves." If you lie awake nights, start at sudden noises, tire easily, are cranky, blue and fidgety, your nerves are probably out of order.

Quiet and relax them with the same medicine that "did the work" for this Colorado girl.

Whether your "Nerves" have troubled you for hours or for years, you'll find this time-tested remedy effective.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

Laxatives are only makeshifts. A mere bowel movement doesn't get at the cause. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless, gentle, yet amazing in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c.
