THE TRANSCRIPT

THE STATEMENT THIS WEEK by Secretary Ickes inviting the Chesapeake Bay Bridge Authority to file another application for a Federal grant for the construction of the proposed Chesapeake Bay Bridge brings that apparently dead issue to life again. Secretary Ickes however advised that the amount of grant be lowered. This information further substantiates the argument that there is little chance of Maryland getting a bridge across the bay connecting two sections of the State unless this State thinks enough of the project to make some investment in it. The present set-up of the Bridge Authority provides for the financing of the entire project to rest on the shoulders of the Federal Government and New York financial interests. The old saying that you can't get something for nothing still holds in spite of the present flowing of Federal funds and the sooner those advocating the bridge realize this the near the project will approach that state of either being completely dead or a much livelier issue. There has never been any great enthusiasm for the bridge as far as State Politics were concerned and the only real Legislation that has succeeded in passage included the provision that the State shall in no way be responsible either legally or financially. Up to the present time the only result of the recent Legislative action has been the opportunity of the Governor to make some salaried political appointments whose accomplishments are yet to be revealed.

THE SUGGESTION HAS BEEN made that the Governor make Captain Wash Woodall an honorary Admiral for his rescue of 420 Marylanders on Tuesday night and also many other rescues on the Bay. If Kentucky can have its Colonels and Texas its Rangers why can't Maryland have its Admirals. The thought is a happy one particularly due to the fact that a large portion of the State is composed of water. It is a wide open field for publicity and also political prestige. Lets start the order of Maryland Admirals, it won't cost anything and will give veteran watermen some to strive and vote for. Application blanks can be secured at this office without cost.

PREFERS JAIL TO HUSBAND

Philadelphia—An attractive brunette, who prefers prison to the beatings administered by her 'husband,' was held today at the Twelfth and Pine Streets station charged with bigamy.

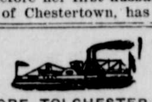

Sobbing 'I don't care what happens to me, I won't take his beatings any longer,' Ethel Dilk, 23, Spruce Street near Seventh, walked into the station early today accompanied by her 'husband,' Russell, 32, Spruce Street near Seventh.

Her one eye was nearly closed and her husband, police said, had been drinking. Both were held for hearings before Magistrate Medway, the husband charged with assault and battery.

The girl, who said her parents are prominent in Chestertown, Md., told Detective Sergeant McEnroe between sobs that she married Dilk last November before her first husband, Ellie Gardner, of Chestertown, has secured a divorce on grounds of desertion. She is the mother of a 5-year-old daughter, who is living with her father at Chestertown.

'I'm a bigamist,' she declared, 'and I was always worried about the welfare of my child. The worry would have driven me crazy if I hadn't come in and told you. I prefer jail to staying with him and take his beatings.

'He always kept a club over my head threatening me with exposure—that I was married to another man without getting a divorce, and I was in constant dread of that. But I don't dread that any longer. I don't care what punishment I get.'
