WITH THE GATHERING of Republican leaders on the Shore today at Ocean City at the invitation of State Senator O. Straughn Lloyd, of Talbot County, indications are that a Congressional fight is in the offing. Senator Lloyd will oppose Congressman T. Alan Goldsborough for the Congressional seat at the coming November election.

Congessman Goldsborough has been victorius in elections held every two year during his long term of office as Congressman from this District which is an indication of the confidence which the large majority have in his ability. There is no reason to believe that this confidence will not again be shown in November. He has certainly worked untiringly for the interests of his consitutants and he has gained considerable recognition in Washington as shown by the positions he holds on important committees.

MAINTAINS HOPE FOR BAY BRIDGE

Although the prospects of the proposed Chesapeake Bay is apparently dead as a door nail since Secretary Ickes told the two Maryland Senators that there are no funds available, Mr. Albert Graham now comes forward with what he claims are new hopes.

It seems that ever since one can remember there has been talk of a Chesapeake Bay Bridge but up to the present time the waves roll merrily on defying any one to cross them in any contrivance other than a boat or air plane.

Mr. Graham, who is chairman of the Chesapeake Bay Bridge Authority now claims that a letter to him from Mr. Ickes gives a rag of hope.

It is interesting to watch these hopes grow and fade if one does not take them too seriously.

P. W. A. PROJECTS FOR SHORE

Grants for additional Maryland projects, totaling almost $1,000,000 bore the approval today of the Public Works Administration.

State Director Abel Wolman announced the grants would begin a program to cost a total of $2,176,000. Principal items in the list include three new schools in Wicomico county.

Approval of funds for the schools removed an apprehension that technical points involved in the financial arrangements might hold up the project.

Wolman said the federal grants in each instance represented 45 per cent of the total cost of the project, the county or community to finance the remaining 55 per cent.

The list of projects and grants included:

Prince George's County, additions and extensions to schools, $52,000.

Washington County, extension to courthouse, Hagerstown, $12,500.

Pocomoke City, municipal building, $21,082.

Wicomico County, schools at Fruitland, Mardella Springs and Camden, $278,000.

Riverdale, municipal building and street improvements, $18,000.

n addition to the grants from the nw fund, the PWA gave Cambridge $54,350 to build interceptor and outfall sewers and a sewage pumping station. Previousuly the PWA had offered to give this amount and lend the additional money needd for the project but the city sold its bonds to private bankers, making it unnecessary to borrow from the government.

The grant to Wicomico County for its school insures the building of new structures at Fruitland, Mardella Springs and Camden. The act authorizing the county to issue bonds for its share of the cost of the school program was found to be faulty, but Wolman said that a state-wide act enabling communities to borrow for PWA purposes would provide the necessary authority.
