CHURCH NOTES

RADIANT LIVING

Release

By Rev. C. M. Griffeth
Pastor Calvary M. E. Church
Sudlersville

I discovered one day the secret of contentment. I came upon this key while digging in the hidden truth of Holy Scripture. I found it under this passage from 'Hebrews': 'Let your conversation be without covetousness; and be content with such things as ye have: for He hath said I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee.'

This passage is a Divine Promise of providence and provision, spoken to the soul by the God of Infinite Love and exhaustless power!

And here is the key that I discovered It is the truth revealed by this promise that contentment lies not in what a man has but in his ability to reply upon the providing God!

Men can never be contented when worried about the future or harassed by the fear of poverty. But when a man puts his covetous nature upon the altar f God and accepts in utmost confidence this warranty bond of promise that God will provide all things needful, he becomes released from tension.

While others rush through the day in fretful dissatisfaction and in nervous irritability and impatience, driven at top speed by a covetous desire for something just beyond their reach, I have found in this divine Promise a blessed release that has enabled me to have to live, time to enjoy what God has already permitted me to have!

How can a man be otherwise than radiant who has tested the fact of which John Newton sings:

'His saints what is fitting shall ne'er be denied,
So long as 'tis written, 'The Lord will provide.'

Telephony Continues Scientific Research Child - Dr. Jewett

Modern telephony, which enables all but about 7 per cent of the total estimated 35,000,000 telephones on the globe to be connected with any Bell System telephone, is the child of organized scientific research, according to Dr. Frank B. Jewett, vice president of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, and president of the Bell Telephone Laboratories. Writing in the Bell Telephone Quarterly, Dr. Jewett thinks that scientific research is destined to continue in this status for many years to come. Without venturing, he says, on the unsafe ground of speculation as to what further research in fundamental science may produce, it is known by telephone scientists that there are still great vistas of possibility for scientific research in the field of telephony and its sister services.

The telephone, far-reaching in its connections, is simple in operation, so that children of tender age use it with ease. Witness Anne Roe telling Daddy that she is all ready for school.

News Dissemination

Scientific research has developed radio telephony so that ocean barriers to speech have been destroyed, and likewise communication made possible to and between ships, airplanes, and all moving vehicles. It has developed radio broadcast and initiated a great new industry in the realm of disseminating news, music, and entertainment. It has made possible the simultaneous transmission of a host of non-interfering messages over the simple circuit which before its advent carried but a single message and that but poorly. Finally, it has made possible the interconnection of all these services and in addition has given birth to a great new industry where sight and sound are joined for the edification and education of the public.

Bell Laboratories

Dr. Jewett says the Bell Telephone Laboratories has built up a great organization of scientifically trained men competent to contribute new knowledge of a fundamental character to attack expeditiously and efficiently any problem which presents itself and with a demonstrative capacity to produce results far exceeding the expenditure of time, effort and money required in their production. It is true, he says, as it has been for many years past that each advance in the art of telephony opens the way to yet other advances. How far it will be commercially practical to go is something for the future to determine, but in the last analysis it is a problem for organized scientific research to which finally the cold impersonal judgment of economies is applied.

Distance No Barrier

Electrical communication, according to Dr. Jewett, has crossed many frontiers in the last few decades. It is true, he says, as in every other field that a frontier once crossed can never again be a frontier. Telephone scientists for whom the spanning of a continent or an ocean with speech channels was once a challenge have through their success closed the door forever to later generations. There is no barrier of distance to telephony anywhere on the globe where man may be. The establishment of telephone channels is purely a matter of economics or of policy.

Sixty-five Countries

Telephone communication is now possible between more than sixty-five countries and geographical locations on the six continents of the globe. Sixty years ago it was possible to talk only between two telephones connected by thirty feet of wire.
