NOW AND THEN

THE CALL OF THE OPEN SEA
By Daisy Rinehart

I am tired of sailing my little boat
Far inside the harbor bar.
I want to be out where the big ships float—
Out on the deep, where the great ones are!

I can't be ever content to bide
Where only ripples come and go:
I must mount the crests of the waves outside,
And breatheless plunge to the trough below;

And should my frail craft prove too slight
For storms that sweep those wide seas o'er
Better go down in the stirring fight
That drowse to death by the sheltering shore.

"Stay home, my Soul and rest", says the poet, but how few heed that warning. In a robin's nest this summer, rgiht under the window, one robin larger than the others seemed restless and anxious to be gone.

One day he was missed, he had flown away. Although he was diligently searched for, he could not be found. Most probably he served as a breakfast for some hungry cat. He like others was anxious to sail on untried seas, incurring all sorts of dangers and troubles in the attempt.

The open sea beckons us, foreign lands are a tempting bait, and now more perils. Shall we stay or shall we go?

Are you gazing at the heavens these starry nights when we can see the constellations much better than when the moon is shining? Just look at Venus, the evening star, at present. One can always tell it by its green light. Orion is bright in the skies right now and down by the horizon is seen the Pleiades that shed their sweet influence abroad.

The old fables tells of the seven beautiful sisters, all of them married to the immortals except one, Merope, she fell in love with a mortal, and, though, at last she was changed into one of the seven stars, her light is very dim.

Wells the author of "The outlines of History" and many other books says he is itred that he has reached the age of three score and ten that he is old, and would fain take his last sleep. "Oh no" said his friend, "You are not old. It is true that seventy years is old for a cabbage but for a tree it is only in its prime and you are a tree."

The crickets have been busier than usual this fall. They have been playing their fiddles incessantly, exhorting us to cheer up. It is said they always bring good luck. Surely they have a very cheering tune.

WHEN NATURE PRAYS
By William Allen Ward

Night is the time when Nature prays
And sings to God in sacred lays;
The oak in silence stands in prayer,
As breezes blow its leafy hair.
The marshland jay gives praise to Him
In humble note from cypress limb;
The cricket hidden beneath a clod
With cymbals beats a chant to God.

SUSAN ANTHONY

Susan Anthony whose memory is held dear by all the would be suffragists, and, in fact, by all women for her upright clean life, is honored by having her profile on the three cent stamp.

Susan Anthony was over 90 years old when she died. She lived to see the cause for which she labored so unceasingly, carried out.

Women have become a great power in Politics these days. They are appealed to by all the political rulers for they know how many of the feminine gender have power and influence.

Mrs. Macy, better known as Miss Sullivan, who took the poor little blind, deaf and dumb Helen Kellar, and taught her by writing in the palm of her hand, to speak write and think, has just passed way holding the hand of her pupil until the last.

They were hardly ever separated these two, for the teacher accompanied her to college, and through all the years there was ready to interpret for her. And when her pupil had really become famous and addressed large audiences her teacher was always there to help and encourage her. She also taught her how to appreciate music, by putting her hand on the instrument and thus feeling the vibratious. In that way she grew to have a keen delight in it.

Last year the two went to Europe together. While in England, they attened a garden party given by King George and Queen Mary. When the Queen saw them there she went over without ceremony and talked with Helen and her companion.

It had always been Helen's desire to meet Bernard Shaw, so Lady Astor arranged a party and invited them both. When Shaw was introduced to Helen he merely shook her hand and passed on. "Oh Mr. Shaw," cried Lady Astor, "She is both deaf and blind. "So are all American," replied Shaw with his costumary sarcasm.

Helen is now going on to middle age, and has lectured and raised much money for the blind, and has been the means of building several institutions for the same.

AT THE MOVIES NEXT WEEK

Carole Lombard's portrayal in "My Man Godfrey" places particular emphasis on the second word of the title, while William Powell tries to be neutral in this Universal comedy romance. But who could resist Carole's charm when she applies a full nelson?

"MY MAN GODFREY" . . . .

Write down all the words that mean funny, capricious, delicious, daffy and ebulliently loony. Add them all together and you have a description of Universal's "My Man Godfrey," which comes on Monday and Tuesday, October 26 and 27, to the New Lyceum Theatre. This outstanding contribution to the new movie season is humor gone on a spree, with the gear shift in high. William Powell and Carole Lombard, in starring roles together for the first time in three years, rise to new heights as experts of light comedy and the rapid fire retort.

Carole Lombard, as the reckless debutante, engages in a high society game called Scavenger Hunting. She comes back with the "forgotten man" in the person of William Powell. She falls for his overpowering masculine charm and employs him as the butler.

The grandest scene in the picture is the ballroom set, when Carole Lombard walks in with William Powell and wins the prize. There are many goats running loose, with young kids bleating after them. Cuckoo clocks strike thirteen; all is merry as a marriage bell; the lights shine bright on fair women and fuzzy-eyed men. The battle of Waterloo was a quiet debate compared to this society party.

The fun really hits full speed when Powell starts buttling for the family. He does not respond to the debutante's advances and she becomes determined to get Her Man Godfrey. The comedy turns into a riot of laughs that bubble like champagne at a night club opening.

Gregory La Cava, one of Hollywood's aces, directed "My Man Godfrey," from the novel by Eric Hatch. This author, rated as a brilliant modern humorist, developed the drollery of the screen play with Morrie Ryskind, remembered for his writing achievements in the stage play, "Of Thee I Sing" and the picture, "A Night at the Opera."

The diamond studded cast supporting William Powell and Carole Lombard includes Alice Brady, Gail Patrick, Jean Dioxn, Eugene Pallette, Alan Mowbray, Robert Light and Franklin Pangborn. The feminine eye will be delighted with the gowns worn by Carole Lombard in the picture. Score about 24 hits for her designer.

"A MIDSUMMER NIGHT'S DREAM" . . . .

The much heralded Max Reinhardt production of "A Midsummer Night's Dream," the greatest of Shakespeare's comedies, and which the entire world has acclaimed as the greatest motion picture ever filmed, will come to the New Lyceum Theatre on Wednesday and Thursday, October 28 and 29, at popular prices.

Warner Bros., who made this picture, have presented the production as a road-show in a number of the world's key cities and the great newspapers of the country thought it of sufficient importance to have accounts of its premieres cabled to them. News gathering agencies have devoted many columns to descriptions of these events for which patrons have paid as high as $10 for a single seat at a premiere.

The importance of the production as a news event is more than the interest in the world's most costly film. The picture, produced by the world's outstanding stage genius, Max Reinhardt, is said to be the first really adequate screen version of a Shakesperian masterpiece.

"A Midsummer Night's Dream," as produced by Reinhardt, is a mighty epic of the screen. It was directed by himself and William Dieterle. The dances were staged by Bronislawa Nijinska and Nina Theilade and set to the beautiful music of Mendelssohn as arranged by Erich Wolfgang Korngold.

There is an all star cast which includes James Cagney, Joe E. Brown, Dick Powell, Jean Muir, Victor Jory, Verree Teasdale, Anita Louise, Hugh Herbert, Frank McHugh and score of others. The screen play is by Charles Kenyon and Mary McCall, Jr. Costumes are by Max Ree.

Resin Has History

"Dragon's Blood," a deep red resin obtained from rattan cane palm trees in eastern Asia, was used until recently for coloring lacquers and varnishes. It has been replaced by coal-tar dyes. Called "cinnabar" by the ancients, it was mentioned by Pliny in his "Naturalis Historia," A. D. 77.

Strange Chinese Custom

The Chinese have a definite system of astrology, 12 animals under one or the other of which everyone must be born, and the star under which one happens to be born has a good deal to do in matters of life. For instance, one born under the fox cannot naturally marry one born under the chicken.
