RADIANT LIVING

The Glory on the Mountain

By Rev. C. M. Griffeth
Pastor Calvary M. E. Church
Sudlersville

As certain flowers that are most fragrant when crushed, so is Christian xperience the most glorious when heart is weary with life's rough going.

When we are at ease in Zion our spiritual zeal seems to quiet down into a reposeful slumber. But when adversities hammer us into wakefulness our faith becomes strong, our hope brightens, and our joy rings out.

This fact of Christian experience is well demonstrated to us by the transfiguration of Jesus. . As the shadow of the cross loomed up before Him through the opposition from the Pharisees, He was lead to ascend the slopes of Mt. Hermon where, apart from the world, He might enter into an undistrubed communion with God.

Here in the quiet of the mountain side He talked with His Father, and "as He was praying, the fashion of His countenance was altered, and his raiment became white and dazzling."

Thus is the spiritual able to transform the material things of life.

Our lives are generally dull and sober until there comes to us in some mountain-experience a glorious transformation. It is in the light of such an experience that one is enabled to see in one's adversity the purposeful will of God.

Do not let adversity keep you from the mountain of prayer. There is a glory awaiting you there!

U. S. Teletypewriter Exchanges Now Serve 9,000 Subscribers

Teletypewriters—Operators switching teletypewriter (twx) communication lines between various subscribers. Teletypewriter exchanges now span the entire continent to form a national teletypewriter system serving over nine thousand subscribers.

Teletypewriter service, now used by more than 9,000 subscribers comprising well over 300 classes of business located in every section of North America, has become an important factor in business and social life. The production of food, clothing, farm implements, transportation facilities and many other industries now use teletypewriter messages to speed their communications here, there and everywhere throughout the country. Teletypewriter exchange service was first operated through switchboards in November, 1931, in the same manner that telephone connections are made.

The diversity of food suppliers using this service, as compiled by the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, for example, includes: bakers, bean merchants, beverage manufacturers, canners, cereal plants, coffee houses, confectioners, dairy producers, distilleries and wineries, fish houses, flour manufacturers, grain producers, food manufacturers, fruit and vegetable stores, grocers, meats, poultry and packing house producers, rice brokers, salt manufacturers, sugar refineries, tea stores and vegetable commission merchants.

These are among the more generally known classes of industry operating teletypewriter services as shown in a directory compiled and published at regular intervals, listing the names and teletypewriter numbers alphabetically by cities throughout the country. Also, a teletypewriter directory listing subscribers by classes of business is available.

Teletypewriters are typewriters that operate electrically over long distance telephone lines. Teletypewriters were first employed in conjunction with leased lines for communication between two or more stations on a full-time basis. The advantages of this means of communication were quickly recognized and the size of the leased network grew rapidly until it became evident that it would be desirable to switch teletypewriters to various typewriter stations located either in the same city or distant cities. As a result teletypewriter switchboards were installed for the interchange of messages from one point to another within the city, state or nation.
