HIGH SPOTS FROM THE HIGH SCHOOL

By EMORY HINES

Words and questions flying quick and fast well describe the recent interscholastic debate Chestertown High's affirmative team had with Federalsburg's last Friday night of the fifth. Down the shore at our opponent's school, Gerson Bonnett, Ruth Adams, and Emory Hines, argued extensively on the subject, "Resolved: That all electric utilities be governmentally owned and operated." Federalsburg's negative team, whom we were against, was composed of three girls. The cross-question ending was used to replace the old type rebutals, one member questioning one of his opponents for fifteen minutes, and vice-versa. The affair was a gallant one indeed, but, haven't yet even told you that our alma mater did not win, our opponents taking the decision favorably. Refreshments were served afterwards by our hosts, however, and congenial conversation once more was resumed.

A return debate with the same school has been scheduled here on Thursday, the eighteenth, at eight o'clock, in the high school auditorium. At this time our negative team of Nellie Bexley, Neal Truslow, and Charlotte Russell will meet Federalsburgh's affirmative one. The subject will remain the same. Further debates with Dover will occur this month, but the dates of them at this time have not been completely worked out.

Last Wednesday the monthly report cards came out, this time, however, bearing also our first semester or half-year grades, which count half of our final average. Results on the whole proved favorable.

Interclass basketball is well in swing with several games being already played. Last week the Senior dribblers were victorious over the Sophomores by a score of 32 to 19. A later game on last Thursday, February 4th, found the Junior five in a good, driving game with the Freshmen, ending in a score of 22-20, in favor of the former. The two teams that are winners will not battle it out to find the school class winner. Although very little practice has been open to the boys, their spirit of competition is still there, and we have a sport to fill in our winter program.

The feminine sex has also been hard to practice during the activities period of several days of the week, and will soon start out on their interclass schedule of games.

Work is still continuing on the new stage and dressing-cloak rooms for our auditorium by the manual arts department. While all the solid backing is completed, latic work that fills the space between the ceiling and upper two-by-fours is now being added. The main curtain will more than likely be hung sometime later in the month.

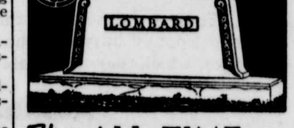

A committee of three, Helen Strong, Catherine Lusby, and myself, appointed and presided over by President Francis Mead, has just recently been trying to decide upon the Senior class play that will be presented near the end of March. No decision has been reached as to what it will be, although at this time it lies between two excellent plays. By next week we will be ready to announce the annual Senior's production, and give you an idea of what it is. Miss Bryan will aid as coach again this year.

Active, again and still, is Footlights and Fancies who last week chose the one act play, "Too Many Marys" as one of three to be presented to the school in the near future. The cast is composed entirely of girls, and from its title should prove interesting to all. Two other skits will be produced along with this, in one of which all the roles are filled by males, and the other of mixed characters. The latter plays have not been decided upon as yet.

The Juniors in the academic course can now say that they are practically in the Senior's shoes, for they are now amid their five minute speeches, which were just recently completed by the graduates-to-be. However, the tenth graders will stop their study of practice public speaking when they complete giving their present talks, whereas we Seniors must soon be prepared with ten minutes talks to be given completely without notes. Some fun!

Since all the anxiety of the Dragon staff's thoughts are out of the question now, they have settled definitely down to work to produce their best possible piece of journalistic work. The annual this year will contain several interesting articles, one of which has taken over two months in preparation, and holds many surprises under its "dummy" cover. Photography will begin soon, while the letting of the printing contract also is to be done this month.

Hi-Spots this week include: the remarkable resemblences we have just noticed, namely, that of Ellen Bordley to Marlene Dietrich and Charlotte Jane Curry to Joan Blondell (the hair and the eyes give them both away)—Joe Weer's definition of democracy as "all men are created equal"—the unquestionable fact the Miles Davidson and Louis Anthony every morning rely on a ride or "pick-up" to get them to school, usually missing it, and just "making" the eight-forty-five tardy bell by the "skin of their teeth"—the economics class's suggestion that they be given a personality aptitude test to find their average by graph—and how truthfully good we all are planning to be during Lent.
