NOW AND THEN

"THE BOUNDARY OF CANADA"

Three thousand miles of border line
—nor fort nor armed host
On all this frontier neighborground,
from east to western coast;
A spectable to conjure with—a thought to stir the blood!
A living proof to all the world of faith in brotherhood.

Three thousand miles of border line-
nor has a century
Seen ought along this common
course but peace and harmony.
O nations bound in brotherhood! O faith in fellow-man!
What better way on earth to dwell
than this God-given plan?

Three thousand miles of border line!
One hundred years of peace!
In all the page of history what parallel to this?
God speed that surely dawning day—
that coming hour divine—
When all the nations of the earth shall boast such border line!

—Selected

Brotherhood! What a wonderful meaning the word implies, unselfishness, trust, peace and prosperity. Did it prevail, there would be no need of arms with their immense cost. No young men as food for cannon, no ssstaggering taxes. Is it any wonder that the two countries, Canada and the United States, feel pride in this fact.

THE IDES OF MARCH

The Ides of March, the 15th of this month is gone and the Income Tax has been handed in 840 million dollars so far, with much more to be reported. This date is looked forward to with as much apprehension, as in the days of Caesar when it was held as a day of bad omen. Criminals who have escaped punishment for other crimes, on some technical point of law, are now in prison for making false returns of their income tax.

THE HAND

The hand is a masterpiece. It feels and acts at the same time.

It acts as if endowed with sight. Owing to the unique properties of its skin, its tactile nerves, its muscles, and its bones, the hand is capable of manufacturing arms and tools. We never would have acquired our mastery over matter without the aid of our fingers, those five small levers, each composed of three articulated segments, which are mounted upon the metacarpus and the bones of the wrist.

The hand adapts itself to the roughest work as well as to the most delicate. It has wielded with equal skill the flint knife of the primitive hunter, the blacksmith's hammer, the woodcutter's ax, the farmer's plow, the sword of the medieval knight, the controls of the modern aviator, the artist's brush, the journalist's pen, the threads of the silk-weaver. It is able to kill and to bless, to steal and to give, to sow grain on the surface of the fields and to throw grenades in the trenches.—Alexis Carrel in Man, the Unknown, published by Harper Brothers, N. Y.

BETSY ROSS AND THE FLAG

A visitor in Philadelphia, some years ago, went to service at old Colonial Christ Church. On taking her seat she saw on the pew an engraved brass plate with the name of Benjamin Franklin on it while across the aisle was one bearing the name of Betsy Ross. Instantly fancy went to work visioning the renowned Betsy, maker of flags, being, consulted by Washington, regarding our country's standard, and of her deft fingers making the famous Stars and Stripes.

Near by was the Flag House, for which the membership of the Pennsylvania Historical Society and membership societies raised over $100,000 for an option on it.

Now a Mr. Theodore Gottlieb in writing to the New York Times is trying to dispel this legend.

He says that nothing was known about Betsey's making the flag until a paper was read by her grandson, William J. Candy before the Pennsylvnaia Historical Society in the year 1870, stating that his grandmother had told him of making the flag, and thus the story grew and grew until now Betsy is remembered with all the other patriots of the Revolution.

Why not let it rest? We knew that she made flags and why should she not have done the one that waved over the victorious army at the battle of Saratoga?

And why should we not believe in Barbara Freiche, a legend that has won thousand of dollars for the City of Frederick?

A country is better for its hero and heroine worship and each has its heroes and legends, Switzerland has the famous story of William Tell and the Apple, Scotland, her legend of the thistle and the geese. Rome, hers, of Romulus and Remus and England of Canute and the waves. They are all inspiring helpful stories, and why should we try to dispel them?

So let us believe in Betsy Ross making the Flag of the free.

ST. PATRICK

St. Patrick, a man, whose memory is dear to all the Irish, is said to have driven all the snakes out of Ireland. But legendary history makes him a greater benefactor of Ireland than that.

t is said that his parents belonged to an old Roman family. When Britain became a Roman province his father and mother emigrated to that country tkaing their small boy, Patrick, with them.

But the child was kidnapped and taken over to Ireland where he worked as a slave. But in spite of this, he grew to love the kind hearted barbarious of that country, and when at last he was found by his parents and taken to France he did not forget them. He was carefully educated by his devoted mother and uncle Martin, and when he became a monk he asked to go to Ireland that he might carry Christianity to them. He went there and spent his life in establishing schools and preaching the Gospel of Christ.

Being a very strong man, he did not hestitate to use his immense strenght in furthering his purpose.

Once, it is said, he liftde a scoffer of Christianity by the beard and compelled him to beg for mercy.

The people loved him very much and he not only precahed Christianity but did much to civilize and change their barbarous ways so every where his name is honored and his day kept in reverence by the Irish.

"Nerves" "NERVES" "Nerves"

Dr. Miles NERVINE "Did the work" says Miss Glivar
WHY DON'T YOU TRY IT?

After more than three months of suffering from a nervous ailment, Miss Glivar used Dr. Miles Nervine which gave her such splendid results that she wrote us an enthusiastic letter.

If you suffer from "Nerves." If you lie awake nights, start at sudden noises, tire easily, are cranky, blue and fidgety, your nerves are probably out of order.

Quiet and relax them with the same medicine that "did the work" for this Colorado girl.

Whether your "Nerves" have troubled you for hours or for years, you'll find this time-tested remedy effective.

At Drug Stores 25c and $1.00.
