CHURCH NOTES

RADIANT LIVING

God-imbued Men

By Rev. C. M. Griffeth
Pastor Calvary M. E. Church
Sudlersville, Md.

The ancient Greeks believed that the gods sometimes assumed human bodies and mingled among men. Their idea is an illustration of the nature of a God-imbued man, for in such a man we do see God walking again among mankind.

Take for instance such heroic characters as Livingstone who left all the opportunities of life that he might walk among the blacks in interior Africa, bringing to them the Gospel message Was it really Livingstone walking there among those blacks, or was it God?

There was John G. Paton who sacrificed all the comforts of home and sailed to the distant South Sea Cannibals to take to them the Gospel message, where he daily ran the risk of his life. Was it after all only John C. Paton, toiling among the islanders, or was it God?

Think again of Sir Wilfred Grenfell, who, converted under a sermon by Moody, went to the coasts of Labrador where he has spent forty-four years of sacrificing service, bringing a complete transformation in the lives of those long neglected people. Was it merely Sir Wilfred Greenfell, making his way voer th ice and through the snows of that faraway northland, or was it God?

Such men, indeed, are like veins of pure gold amid the surrounding dross of self-centered lives.

Such men have opened their inmost souls to the Spirit of God. God came to dwell within them. God, through their lives, lived among men.

Oh that I might be such a God-imbued man!

Dozens of Castes Among Hindus; Twice-Born Aces

Among the Hindus there are dozens of castes, of which the Brahmins, or Twice-Born, are the highest. There are many lower grades until one comes to the Untouchables, who are pariahs and outcasts in the extreme sense. The members of any caste are not allowed to marry into a higher, but Untouchables are usually segregated in their own villages, like lepers.

In Bengal they enjoy a certain freedom, but if the shadow of one fell on a Brahmin when he was eating, the man would have to cast away his food and fine brass dishes, bathe in the River Ganges and make "pooja" (prayers and sacrifices).

In other parts, where old customs die hard, Untouchables have an exceedingly thin time. In Britain dogs are treated better.

Some of the worst areas lie along the Malabar coast and in the Madras Presidency. Here, according to a writer in London Tit-Bits Magazine, outcastes have to keep their distance from Brahmins. Thus, a Brahmin is polluted if a Shanar—toddy tapper—comes within twenty-four paces of him. Tiyans must keep thirty-six paces away; cobblers, masons, blacksmiths, and carpenters twenty-four paces; Pulyan cultivators forty-eight paces; and Doms, Chamars, and Pariahs—who eat beef—sixty-four paces. Nayars can approach, but not touch, a Brahmin, who will also exhibit disgust if the shadow of a European falls on him while eating.

The Paisley Shawl

A Paisley shawl is a kind of woolen shawl imitating a cashmere shawl, formerly made at Paisley, Scotland, between 1805 and about 1850.

Where Seed Pearls Are Found

"Seed" pearls are so called because they are tiny and appear like seeds. They are the pearls of Germany, Ireland, Scotland, Russia and China.

Bark Produces Dyes

Barks from many common trees produce dyes having good color fastness and are used on woods and other materials.

First Life Insurance Policy

The first American life insurance policy was written in Philadelphia in 1813.

Spar Buoy

Pointer First to "Stand" Game

The pointer is truly and correctly named. So far as historians are able to figure out, the pointer was the first dog to "stand" game—that is, to point game as we understand the phrase. Such being the case, the pointer was developed as a breed before the setter. When we look back over the history of the pointer, says a writer in the Chicago Tribune, we find that the first reliable record of the breed appeared in England about 1650. This was before the time of wing shooting with guns. According to history, the pointer was used to locate hares instead of birds.

THOSE WHO REMAIN

When death visits a home, the first concern is to perform the last service to the loved one in a becoming manner. What ever is done must express all the reverance and affection that is felt at such a time. But in addition to this a further responsibility rests upon the funeral director. It is his privilege and duty to lessen as far as lies with in his power, the burdens laid upon those who remain. By countless little acts of thoughtfulness he can make the way easier for them.

We consider this part of our work as important as any other. Our highest aim is to have our patrons look upon us as trusted friends, ready and anxious to render sympathetic assistance to those who remain behind.
