NOW AND THEN

THE TORCH BEARER

By Nellie B. Bradley

Hold high the torch; You did not light its glow;
'Twas given you from other hands, you know.
'Tis only yours to keep it burning bright,
Yours to pass on when you no more need light.
For there are little feet that you must guide,
And little forms go marching by your side;
Their eyes are watching every tear and smile,
And efforts that you think are not worth while
May sometimes be the very helps they need,
Actions to which their souls would give most heed,
So that in turn they'll lift it high and say,
"I watched my mother carry it this way."

If brighter paths should beckon you to choose,
Would your small gain compare with all you'd lose?
Then lift the torch; You did not light its glow;
'Twas given you from other hands you know.
I think it started down its pathway bright
The day the Maker said, "Let there be light."

How many, I wonder, arose very early Sunday morning, July 18, to see the new comet that was at the nearest point to our earth at that time. I know of one, who was gazing skyward then but the trees hid that part of the horizon from view. It was worthwhile, howevr to see the heavens at the early dawn.

It is Alfred Kreymborge who says: "The sky is that beautiful old parchment in which the sun and the moon keep their diary.

To read all, one must be a linguist more learned than Father Wisdom, and a visionary more clairvoyant than Mother Dream."

Sir Walter Raleigh handsome courteous knight that he was, was first brought to the notice of his Queen, the powerful Elizabeth, by spreading his mantle over a mud hole which lay in her pathway.

After that there was nothing that the young courtier asked of her that she did not willingly grant.

She gave him a part of the new land, America. He called it, Virginia after the Virgin queen, but when he sent forth his colony they landed on Roanoke Island in North Carolina instead. It was here that the first white child, Virginia Dare, was born. But this colony did not prosper, and Mr. Dare with others, sailed for England to get supplies. Travelling was very difficult in those days, and it was a long time before they returned to the colony.

When they got back, not a trace of th people was found but only on on of the trees was written, the word "Crotan." There is a tradition that they were taken by friendly Indians, and intermarried with them, but there is nothing to prove this was so.

But on beautiful Roanoke Island they have built memorials for this lost colony, and now they are celebrating the 350th centenary of this settlement. Services are held, lovely music composed for the event, and pageants are being acted all during this summer. The name of Raleigh is highly honored in North Carolina in consequence. The state has named her capital city for him.

On the death of his queen sad times came to Raleigh. King James 1st accusd him of being a traitor, and for twelve long years he was in prison. While there, he wrote a "History of the World" a work much prized at that time. Afterwards, he was taken out of prison and beheaded, but his name is still remembered with pride both in England and in this country.

It was in a flower garden, fragrant flowers were waving their heads in the wind each vying with the other beauty.

A humming bird came to visit them. He went to one after another dipping its tiny bill in their cups and sucking their sweets.

How proudly the flowers held up their heads and invited the bird to come to them. Never was there a more welcome visitor.

And when he flew, away, the blossoms bowed their heads as though they were sorry at the departure of the lovely bird.

The trek of travel seems to be going towards Canada. Many are going to Nova Scotia where they will visit the Village of Grand Pre, the place made famous by Longfellows' poem, Evangeline. Here is seen the small church crowned with a cross, and nearby a statue of Evangeline.

Her story is one of the saddest stories in fiction. Her ceaseless search for her lover, who was looking for her. Sometimes she would only miss him by a day, but restless because he could not find her he went on his ceaseless search. It was only after Evangeline had given up the search and became a nurse to minister to the fever infested city of Philadelphia, that she found him. As she went from one bed of sufferers to another she saw an old grey headed man, dying. She knew him at once and when she cried "Gabriel", he opened his yees and saw her. No longer the lovely girl he had loved but an old woman, but ready to comfort and bless him. He died on the night she found him, but a great peace came into her heart, for she knew he was no longer wandering in search for her.

Pilot-Fish

There is a small fish about twelve inches long, called the pilot-fish, a member of the mackerel family. This fish accompanies ships and also sharks, guiding the sharks to their food. It swims close in front of the shark, not only to obtain fragments of the food scattered by the shark but also to secure protection from its enemies.

WOMANS COLUMN

Many American women were presented to Royalty this spring, but those who did not share that honor, need not envy them. It is not social prestige that wins it but mostly through politicians. After applying for admission, the aspirants have to wait a long time before the engraved card comes with permission to be presented.

Then next there is the dress to consider. These dresses are made by the dress makers of the royal robes and 3,000 dollars is a small sum to pay for thm. After the dress is finished the next thing is suitable conveyances which have to arrive hours before they are invited into the Court.

After waiting in the crush and jam they are at last admitted. Then slowly up the long time they approach her majsty, and courtesy, then they pass on.

They then prceed to a dining room and are served with a collation, after which they go back to their homes and the great event is over. "The light is hardly worth the candle."

SEA VOYAGE OF '70's WAS REAL ORDEAL

Bertha N. Briggs, in New York Times Magazine

Thousands of Americans departing for Europe at this season of the year walk up the gangplank, taking for granted a great, steady liner which will speed them across the ocean. Of course, it is well ventilated, agreeably heated, brlliantly lighted and equipped with every device for safety and comfort.

Yet only yesterday the traveler who have found few of these luxuris, his boarded a transatlantic liner would have found few of these luxuries, his and his grandfather would have lacked certain necessities. One ashore, these earlier travelers would have had to struggle with the hazards of primitive trains, diligences and river boats.

Charles Carroll Fulton, of Baltimore, in his view of "Europe Through American Spectacls," says that "in planning a trip abroad, the voyage across should not be numbered among its pleasures." He is supported in that statement by the testimony of all th other chroniclers. A clergyman cris out, "If God would forgive us, we should not commit the sin of going to sea a second time"

The ships in the fifty years between 1835 and 1885 varied in size from what is called "a magnificent vessel of 1,500 tons," to the great superliner of the late seventies which attained 5,500 tons. The achievement of such bulk causes one daring prophet to suggest that it is not improbable that the future will see great vessels of 10,000 tons burden. Whether the steamers were driven by paddle wheels or screws, they all carried sail, which was set in favorable winds making this picture possible: "Our leviathan steamer with all sails set."

Onc outside the harbor the steamers began to display all their virtuosity in the line of movement. The paddlewheelers seemed to have had a particularly distressing motion. Harriet Beecher Stowe writes that "even in the calmest sea the ship rocks from side to side with a steady, dizzy motion like that of a cradle."

Howard Payson Arnold asserts that "the cleanliest steamer abounds in fumes compared to which the two and seventy stenches of Cologne are as the perfumes of Araby." The rich assembly of odors which lingered in the cabins, of onions, cooking food, tobacco smoke, engine grease and steam, permeated the staterooms, and the resultant agony was all too audible outside, for we learn that "above the frighftul din of the engines were heard the groans of the victims, sharp cries for the stewards," and one sound mentioned in all the books, "the splintering crash of breaking crockery."

The passengers' staterooms were small and the berths narrow and springless. Mr. Arnold, traveling as a newspaper correspondent, writes from his own experince: "Sleep in a statroom is the offspring of asphyxiation, the parent of cramp and the writhing of a doomed body in a coffin." If husband and wife traveled together, wife unquestionably took the upper berth.

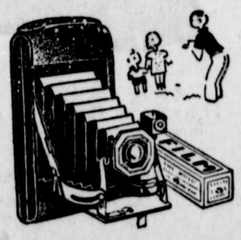

THE PREACHER USED HIS OWN JUDGMENT

The parishioners of St. Michael's Green, London were horrified when Butcher Bloodsow, a noted rough, rushed up and slapped their new vicar on the cheek.

The vicar, a mild looking man, turned his other cheek to him, and Bloodsow gave it a ringing blow.

Then the vicar said: "I guess the good Lord will now allow me to use my own judgmnt" and he rushed on the Butcher and gave him such a beating that he was carried away on a stretcher.

The vicar had learned boxing at college.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sunk and the world looks punk.

Laxatives are only makeshifts. A mere bowel movement doesn't get at the cause. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless, gentle, yet amazing in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25¢.

Not Pre-Shrunk

The buckskin trousers Ohio pioneers wore were seldom shrink-proof. Oftentimes a man's trousers would shrink so much in a rain that he had to cut them off.

The "Withdrawing Room"

Originally a drawing room was a "withdrawing room," where ladies went after leaving men to finish their conversation at the dining table.

The largest and most magnificent private dwelling in the world is said to be the Palazzo Doria in Rome, which is over 400 years old.
