ON THE SCREEN AT THE NEW LYCEUM

Joan Blondell and Leslie Howard in "Stand-In."

Before you do an other thing—because nothing can possibly be as important as a laugh fest like this—gather up the family and head down to the New Lyceum Theatre where "Stand-In," Walter Wanger's hilarious comedy about Hollywood will play on Monday and Tuesday, Dec. 27 and 28.

Leslie Howard and Joan Blondell head the roster of stars in this hysterical screen version of Clarence Budington Kelland's Saturday Evening Post story. The charming Leslie emerges as a simply swell comedian in the role of Atterbury Dodd, the shy, bespectacled banker who goes to Hollywood to take over the $10,000,000 Colossal Studios and run them by the science of mathematics, and Joan is grand as the stand-in of the title who helps him over the Hollywood hurdles, helps him foil the conspirators who are plotting to get the studio, teaches him to rhumba and makes him realize (after much maidenly effort) that he's more than a human adding machine.

Hollywood comes in for one grand ribbing—from the temperamental glamour star, the fantastic foreign director (this one stops a picture and sends to the Swiss Alps for real edelweiss), the young producer who's a genius when he's sober, and the sharp-shooting press agent, to the palatial, "prop"-furnished mansions, the livered limousines and the studios with their madhouse confusion.

Humphrey Bogart plays the genius producer (and never once draws a gat), Alan Mowbray has his maddest (and best) role as Koslofski, the foreign director, Marla Shelton is splendid as the glamous star who winds up as stooge for a gorilla-man, C. Henry Gordon is his usual villanious self as Nassau, the scheming rival producer, and Jack Carson is swell as Potts, the obnoxious press agent.

"Stand-In" represents the best writng job that that mad and matchless team Gene Towne and Graham Baker have done to date and Tay Garnett turns in a directing job that does him and Hollywood proud.

But go see for yourself. We can't tell you any more—just talking about it has us laughing again!

"Face the camera, Mr. DiMaggio." Thousands of youngsters who idolize Joe DiMaggio, the Yankee Centerfielder, may have experienced certain doubts as to their feelings toward Joe DiMaggio, movie actor—that is, until Republic's "Manhattan Merry-Go-Round," featuring the baseball here, comes to the New Lyceum on Wednesday, and Thursday, December 29 and 30.

Joe had to overcome obstacles for his first picture role. It's not an easy job for a rugged athlete like Joe to permit himself to be powdered and painted by the studio make-up crew, and it's harder still to croon, and make love to fair ladies before the camera.

Joe carries off his role in fine style, however, and is just as affective as a screen Romeo as he is on the baseball diamond, knocking out the home runs.

Phil Regan ard Ann Dvorak star in this newest musical whims yfrom Republic. A galaxy of screen and radio luminaries support them, including Leo Carrillo, Tamara Geva, Henry Armeteta, James Gleason, Kay Thompson and her Rhythm Choir, Cab Calloway and orchestra, Ted Lewis and orchestra, and Gene Autry.

"The Barrier," one of the most popular novels ever written by the master of outdoor fiction, Rex Beach, has been made into a motion picture by Producer Harry Sherman.

It took seven long years of negotiations before Sherman could get the screen rights to the story, which he considers the best material for an outdoor film that Beach has ever turned out.

"The Barrier," which opens Friday, December 31, and Saturday, January 1, at the New Lyceum Theatre, is the story of a romance between a West Point graduate on duty in Alaska (James Ellison) and a young Alaskan girl, (Jean Parker), who is believed to be half Indian. An absorbing photoplay lies in the way the two overcome the obstacle of mixed blood, and work out their happiness together.

In the cast of "The Barrier" are Leo Carrillo, Jean Parker, James Ellison, Otto Kruger, Robert Barrat, Andy Clyde and Sara Haden. The film was directed by Les Selander.
