COLLEGE LECTURE TO BE ON MUSIC

Second Of New Series To Be Tuesday Night

Music is to have its place in the sun in the series of popular and public lectures being given by members of the Washington College Faculty. "Music—Old and New" is the title of a discussion to be presented by Miss Louise B. Russell, Instructor in Music at the Chestertown institution, at eight in the evening, Tuesday, January 18, in the Assembly Room of William Smith Hall. Regular patrons of these lectures are cautioned to observe the change in night, from Monday, as heretofore, to Tuesday, as will obtain in the future.

Miss Russell will take up for explanation each of the five principal schools, centering her attention around music for the piano, and illustrating each by piano selections. The speaker-player needs no introduction to Chestertown or Washington College audiences, her talents being well-known hereabouts.

In an interview, Miss Russell explained her subject as including a discussion of the Ecclesiastical School, represented by the older and simpler types of music, as found in the chorals and the mass. An outstanding modern exponent is Palestrina. Next in sequence comes the Contrapuntal or Polyphonic, in which two independent melodies are blended together, and for which Bach was the great master.

The third School is the Harmonic, exemplified by Beethoven, Haydn, and Mozart, while the fourth or Romantic School listed such notable names as Chopin and Schumann for the piano, Schubert in song and Weber for the opera. Lastly comes the Impressionistic School, founded by Debussy.

The Romanticists began to break away from the classical tradition of form and the Impressionists have completed this movement and express their ideas as they see fit, regardless of the dictates of time-honored pattern. Music—Old and New;—a treat for the music lovers of Kent and Queen Anne's. See you there.

FEDERAL AGENTS RAID DUCKS TRAPS

500 Traps Destroyed And Ducks Liberated

Federal game enforcement agents of the United State Biological Survey have confiscated and destroyed nearly 500 wildduck traps during the past three months in Maryland and Virginia along the Chincoteague and Chesapeake bays.

Agents are making an effort to stamp out the illegal practice of trapping and marketing water fowl. Most of the ducks caught by trappers in this section are bought by "duck bootleggers," the survey reports, who in turn sell them in large Eastern cities.

Means Of Taking Fowl

Under the Migratory Bird Treaty Act water fowl may be taken only by certain specific methods. Shotguns not larger than No. 10 gauge and holding not more than three shells are permitted.

Duck trapping, baiting to attract the gowl and sale or purchase of these birds wihtout Government permit are illegal.

The report says that about half of the traps seized in Maryland and Virginia this season were found on Smith Island, in Chesapeake Bay, and in the Chesconnesses marshes on the Eastern Shore of Virginia. Others were found in Chincoteague Bay.

Ducks Are Liberated

Hundreds of ducks—pintails, mallards and black ducks—were liberated from the traps by the Federal agents.

Most of these agents are now engaged in breaking up post-season violations of water-fowl regulations. They are organized so that they can shift quickly to any section where violations are reported. In Maryland the Federal agents are being assisted by State game and police officials.

CHILDRENS AID ELECTS OFFICERS

Mrs. W. D. Hines Named President

Mrs. Dorsey Hines was elected President, succeeding, Mrs. Morris K. Barroll, who was elected Vice President. Mrs. Clark Grieb was elected Secretary and Mrs. Raymond T. Humphreys, Treasurer.

The committee wishes to thank the School Board and the children of the Kent County schools for their cooperation concerning the Mile of Penny Bags placed in the schools to aid in helping these underpriviledged children and wishes to announce the returns of $49.30. This money, it must be understood, remains in Kent county for Kent county children.
