CHURCH NOTES

RADIANT LIVING

Sunrise

By Rev. C. M. Griffeth
Pastor Calvary M. E. Church
Sudlersville, Md.

It was just off the Delaware Shore. We had put into one of those little creeks for the night and at an early hour we were starting out for another day's work at oystering.

As we slipped out of the little creek and headed for the oyster grounds, everything was enveloped in fog.

We could see but a short distance into the light gray of that morning mist. Here and there were what seemed to be a shadow, but which, as we gradually lapproached, assumed the form of another boat.

There was perfect stillness everywhere, except the swish of the water at the bow, the putt-putt-putt of our exhaust and the conversation of the men who at aft smoking while waiting for breakfast.

It was a fantastic scene in grays.

And then came that georgeous coloring!

Those gray mists began to blush—first a palish pink, which gradually deepened into crimson. Then, from the horizon, there shot up to the zenith great beams of old rose that brightened into saffrons and yellows.

It was sunrise!

Gradually the mists dispersed and disclosed to us the vast blue expanse of the Delaware Bay, sparkling in the joyous light of the morning rays. A day's work lay ahead. We soon reached our grounds and tackled our tasks with a vim.

The mists, dull and gray, which attend one's life, take on a rosy hue of inspiration when there mounts over one's horizon the Son of God. Before His radiance, mists are dispersed, and one feels called to a life of service as vast and as noble as the sea.

Such a one shapes his course to a definite purpose. And under that Divine Radiance which makes both his life and his task glorious, he does in life a full day's work.

THOSE WHO REMAIN

When death visits a home, the first concern is to perform the last service to the loved one in a becoming manner. What ever is done must express all the reverance and affection that is felt at such a time. But in addition to this a further responsibilty rests upon the funeral director. It is his privilege and duty to lessen as far as lies with in his power, the burdens laid upon those who remain. By countless little acts of thoughtfulness he can make the way easier for them.

We consider this part of our work as important as any other. Our highest aim is to have our patrons look upon us as trusted friends, ready and anxious to render sympathetic assistance to those who remain behind.

B. R. FELLOWS,
Funeral Director.
