BUDDIES

CASSIDY OF BAR 20

A familiar Western team reappears in "Cassidy of Bar 20," coming to The New Lyceum Theatre. They are William Boyd, who has played Clarence E. Mulford's hero, Hopalong Cassidy in a long line of films, and his snow-white charger, "Nappy."

Vocal coaches were busy during the filming of "Everybody Sing," coming to the New Lyceum Theatre on Monday and Tuesday, March 14 and 15, for in the picture everybody actually sings.

Allan Jones, Judy Garland, Fanny Brice and Lynne Carver didn't mind singing as it was nothing new to them.

But in the case of Billie Burke, Reginald Owen, and Reginald Gardiner, it was something else again for it marked their debut as singers. For two months they took three singing lessons a week and were really able to swing it by the time the picture went into production.

Nine songs are featured in the new musical. Allen Jones sings "On With the Show," "The One I Love" and "Cosi Cosa." Judy Garland sings "Swing Mr. Mendelssohn," "Down on Melody Farm," "Sweet Chariot" and "I Wanna Swing." Fanny Brice has a riotous comedy song in "Quainty, Dainty Me" and the entire cast of principals, including Lynne Carver and Reginald Gardiner, join in the "Quartette from Rigoletto."

The story of "Every body Sing" concerns a young girl who gets expelled from several schools because of her craze for swing singing. Her father is a playwright and her mother an actress. They're a mad lot and without any financial sense. They send Judy to Europe, but she sneaks off the boat before it leaves and gets a job singing in a night club. With the family chef, Allan Jones, as her aid, she manages to promote a musical show and thus saves her family from financial ruin.

The finale is the high spot of the picture. When Jones, on opening night, discovers that he has less than a dozen people in the theatre, he leads a parade up and down Broadway until he has 2000 people following him. He leads them right into the theatre and thus has a full house. The dance sequences were directed by Dave Gould.

When Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, last fall, announced its intention of producing in England pictures comparable to any made in Hollywood, and using its top ranking stars, both England and Amreica eagerly looked forward to the result.

"A Yank at Oxford," coming on Wednesday and Thursday, March 16 and 17, to the New Lyceum Theatre, the first of the M-G-M British made productions, more than fulfills the promise. It presents Robert Taylor in his most thoroughly satisfying role to date. It brings to screen audiences an authentic and sympathetic delineation of life at Oxford that could have been obtained only in the actual locale.

A he-man, athletic characterization on the part of Taylor, rounded and convincing performances by Lionel Barrymore and Maureen O'Sullivan, and fine contributions by a group of outstanding British players, make the film memorable. Particularly to be noted are Vivien Leigh as the "other girl," Griffith Jones as Taylor's undergraduate enemy, Edmund Gwenn as the Oxford Dean, C. V. France as the tutor, and Edward Rigby as Taylor's "scout."

The consistently fast tempo of the film, its comedy which provokes gales of laughter, its thrilling athletic sequences, especially in the climactic Oxford-Cambridge boat race, are all attributable to the guiding hand of Director Jack Conway, who has established a high mark for which his American successors in England can shoot.
