ON THE SCREEN AT THE NEW LYCEUM

Nelson Eddy
and Jeanette MacDonald in
"The Girl of the Golden West"

Surpassing all their previous screen appearances in the language of music, Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy are seen and heard in an exquisite panorama of romnace and song in "The Girl of the Golden West" at which comes on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, April 18, 19 and 20 to the New Lyceum Theatre.

The loveiy new songs heard in the picutre include "Senorita," "Soldiers of Fortune," "The Wind in the Trees," "Shadows on the Moon," "Who Are We to Say," "From Sun-up to Sundown" and "Mariachie," which is the theme of a lavish Spanish festival.

In the story, Mary, owner of a dance hall, is loved by the gambling sheriff, Jack Rance. On her way to Monterey her stage coach is held up by the romantic masked bandit, Ramerez, with whom she later falls in love, believing him to be Lieutenant Dick Johnson. A former sweetheart betrays Ramerez. He escapes, wounded, in a gun fight with the sheriff but is captured later in Mary's cabin.

After being caught cheating in a game of cards with Rance for the bandit's life, Mary agrees to marry the sheriff if he will liberate Ramerez. On the day of the wedding Rance again finds the lovers together and the picture ends with a ingenious climax.

The deft touch of Robert Z. Leonard, the director, and the flawless photography of Oliver Marsh, cameraman, have made "The Girl of the Golden West" a beautiful picture. Praise also goes to the supporting cast outstanding members of which are Walter Pidgeon, Leo Carrill, Buddy Ebsen, Leonard Penn, Priscilla Lawson, BobMurphy, Olin Howland, Cliff Edwards, Billy Bevan, Brandon Tynan, H. B. Warner and Monty Woolley.

Via the genius of David O. Selznick and the magic of technicolor, Mark Twain's famous characters stepped from the pages of his immortal story and on to the screen of the New Lyceum Theatre where Mr. Selznick's inspired technicolor production, "The Adventures of Tom Sawyer," will show on Thursday, and Friday, April 21 and 22.

Tom Sawyer, Huckleberry Finn, Joe Harper, Becky Thatcher, Aunt Polly, Injun Joe, Muff Potter and all the rest came to vivid life again in the little Missouri town along the Missouri town along the Mississippi, which is where Tom and his friends achieved immortality.

David O. Selznick, who has scored outstanding successes with the filming of such classics as "David Copperfield," in which he brought Freddie Bartholomew to fame; "Little Lord Fauntleroy" and the later smash hits, "A Star Is Born" and "The Prisoner of Zenda," has surpassed even his own great record with "The Adventures of Tom Sawyer." It is a triumph of marvelous entertainment and one of the finest things that has ever been done. In black and white it would be a great picture. In technicolor it is superb. The subject is one that lends itself to color and some of the shots are breathtakingly magnificent, especially those where Tom and Becky are lost in the cave. It is said to be the first time a cavern with its stalacties and stalagmites has been shown in natural color. Moreover, the pictorial effects of the quaint settings of the small town and the background of the Mississippi against which the colorful and interesting characters play out their drama, are all heightened by the use of color.

It is apparent that no effect was spared by Mr. Selznick in transferring this classic to celluloid. Meticulous care has been exercised in capturing the spirit of Mark Twain's story. As this heartwarming drama unfolded on the screen, the audience alternately chuckled at the adventures and escapades of the irrepressible Tom and his cronies, laughed at the pranks that plagued Aunt Polly and the neighbors, thrilled to the drama of Injun Joe and Muff Potter, glowed with the young romance of Tom and Becky Thatcher, gasped at their fight for life in the bat-infested cave and grew misty-eyed as the pict ure awakened poignant memories of the past and made them relive again similar scenes in their own lives.

Tom Sawyer, who has come to be the embodiment of all American boyhood and a beloved hero to millions the world over, was recreated by Tommy Kelly, who was chosen by David O. Selznick out of 25,000 aspirants for the role.

Those who recall the Selznick nation-wide talent hunt will realize when they see the picture, why Tommy Kelly was picked. He is a natural, typical American boy who possesses to a marked degree that elusive quality known as screen personality, and his portrayed of the famous "Tom Sawyer" would thrill even his creator could be witness it.

The cast is an impressive one and includes May Robson, who gives one of her finest performances as Aunt Polly; Jackie Moran is the ragged Huckleberry Finn; Becky Thatcher, red hair, blue eyes, freckles and all, is played by Ann Gillis; Walter Brennan is the town derelict, Muff Potter; Victor Jory makes a sinister and menacing Injun Joe; Cora Sue Collins is convincing as Amy Lawrence and David Holt is excellent as Tom's brother, Sid Sawyer. In the school scene presided over by Donald Meek as the severe school master, a host of fifty or more juvenile extras are seen.

Norman Taurog, who is considered Hollywood's outstanding genius in the handling of juvenile talent, directed, and he has done a perfect job.

Credit for the superb photography goes to James Wong Howe, the famous Chinese cameraman, who photographed the picture in association with Wilfred Cline, technicolor specialist.

"The Adventures of Tom Sawyer," which is released through United Artists, is glorious, thrilling entertainment and to miss it is to miss one of your greatest experiences in a motion picture theatre.

Pious Painter

Juan Juanes, born in 1523, the Fra Angelico of Spain, was so devout that it is related of him that he never began a painting of Christ or the Virgin without previously fasting and praying. No secular subject was ever treated by his brush; he had consecrated his art to the service of the church, and of the church alone.
